Joy From Within.
Mrs. Roosevelt's Wisdom.
The Roosevelt Which?
Clergymen Would Fight.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

WILMINGTON, Del., May 10.

THE MOST cheerful sight on this trip from Florida's tropics to New York's worries presents itself in a dismal, unlikely spot. Forlorn, uncultivated land on both sides of the track, sad pine forests, every tree trunk slashed, far up and low down, with cruel white gashes from which the tree's life flows, to provide turpentine and other products.

BENEATH THE trees stands a dilapidated low wooden cabin that has never known paint, the wobbling roof patched with tar paper. Such a cabin elsewhere would remind you of the lines "bleak without, and bare within, such the house that I live in."

But not that cabin, for among the pine needles, before the open door, two small Negro children are dancing, whirling round, inventing the dance as they go, laughing, clapping their hands, singing to provide dance music. One is a boy of ten, one a girl of seven or eight.

YOU MIGHT travel the world over and not find two happier faces. From those children, and their joy, you learn that happiness is a product of the human heart that defies poverty and loneliness. In all their short lives they have known nothing but poverty and misery, but they refuse to be discouraged. Happiness is within.

You cannot discourage or hold down the human race, while it has that quality, not by war's wholesale murder, or speculation's wholesale robbery, or "civilization's" brutal selfishness and exploitation.

MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, whose sound common sense and simplicity the people admire, says she does not quite agree with brain trust members who say the depression is over. She says:

"I am not quite so sure of it, with ten millions out of work."

The ten millions will say amen to that. They are not quite sure either and the Department of Commerce reports the number of families on relief as of April first larger this year than at the same time last year.

MRS. ROOSEVELT went to attend a ceremony at the old New York house where her father, Elliot Roosevelt, lived as a boy, with his brother, Theodore Roosevelt, the home of Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt's grandmother.

A tablet on the house tells you that it was the home of the late President Theodore Roosevelt. Some day there will be another plate, on a house at Hyde Park, overlooking the Hudson.

Which will be the more important Roosevelt "shrine" one hundred years hence? The next two years will answer that question.

If the present Roosevelt reaps in his experiments the success that his courage deserves, he will be THE Roosevelt, and history will merely add that he had a cousin who built the Panama Canal.

THE REV. T. GUTHRIE SPEERS says that thirteen thousand clergymen have announced their intention not to sanction or participate in any future war.

The distinguished Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick intimates that he is ashamed of his work, as chaplain, in the big war, urging on men about to go out and kill others.

YOU ASSUME that thirteen thousand clergymen cannot be wrong, but the memory of that tall, powerful Norman archbishop, dressed all in white, with a heavy mace in his right hand, riding his war horse into the thick of the fighting at the battle of Hastings, beside the conqueror and remaining among the dead, seems more romantic than a conscientious clergyman saying:

"Nothing would make me fight for my country or even pray the Lord to make my side win."

BESIDES, THE THIRTEEN thousand clergymen are mistaken. Every one of them would fight, if Asiatics in khaki were over-running this country, coming down in planes, full of deviltry. If the Reverends Guthrie Speers and Harry Emerson Fosdick saw three or four such invaders, bayonets set, entering a house containing the mothers or sisters of those clergymen, the latter would surprise themselves and the foreign soldiers with their performance.

Any man not a mouse would fight in a righteous war, and this country has engaged in no other, except when it went gallivanting abroad in the big war, as a catspaw for financiers with bills to collect from Europe.

And the foolishness cost ten thousand millions lent, and five times as much squandered and stolen by dollar a year patriots and incompetents. For that kind of a war the thirteen thousand are eternally right.

WHEN SWARMS of buffalo gnats attacked cattle in the west recently, killing horses, mules and cattle, it was suggested here that the government or some big oil company might attack the swarms of insect life, spraying crude oil or some other substance, under pressure, from airplanes.

The nation might well add that to its many other experiments, especially as it would cost nothing. For some reason, this country seems afraid to deal with aviation on its own account.

THE BRITISH are not thus handicapped, and following government experiments in Rhodesia the British royal air force will fight the locust swarms throughout South Africa, spray-

MILLIONAIRE KIDNAPED AT PARTY

Friend Tied to Tree As Two Gunmen Abduct Broker

International News Service.

ARCADIA, Cal., May 10.—Two armed and masked men early today kidnaped William F. Gettle, 47, retired millionaire oil man and former chain store executive, from his newly-purchased $250,000 estate in the foothills near here.

A midnight swimming party had just broken up and Gettle, with a friend, James P. Wolf, wealthy furniture man, were in a summer-house near the pool when the two abductors entered and seized them.

TAKEN IN AUTO

Gettle was taken away in an automobile.

Wolf was tied to a tree from which he escaped and sounded the alarm.

The scene of the kidnaping is 10 miles from Pasadena, home of numerous wealthy persons, and 25 miles from Beverly Hills, where a majority of the movie stars have their homes.

In order to effect the daring kidnaping, the gunmen used a stepladder to get over the eight-foot concrete wall topped with barbed wire protecting the Gettle estate.

NO RANSOM NOTE

Gettle, who weighs 200 pounds, is slightly bald and wears gold-rimmed glasses, was being held prisoner probably in the hills back of the home. No ransom notes had been received by the family.

Mrs. Gettle, an invalid, was in a state of collapse in their Beverly Hills home. There, too, were the four children.

Armed guards watched the home as word was expected momentarily.

Gettle bought the estate, part of the old "Lucky" Baldwin place, a year ago when his wife fell ill.

As a result of the postponement, the Pirates' management announced that tomorrow will be ladies' day.

Trotzky's Villa Offered for Rent

PARIS, May 10.—(AP.) — The "for rent" sign went up today at Leon Trotzky's hiding place at suburban Barbizon.

Trotzky himself presumably still is on an automobile tour of France with detectives, pending final arrangements for him to live in some other country.

Dollfuss Escapes New Bomb Attempt

SALZBURG, Austria, May 10.—(AP.)—Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss again narrowly escaped death today when authorities found a high explosive bomb at the airport station here shortly before he arrived from Vienna for a patriotic front meeting.

Bolts Strike As Dust Storm Moves on City

A choking, blinding duststorm, driven by a 45-mile-an-hour wind, hurtled toward Pittsburgh today, according to a warning by Weather Forecaster W. S. Brotzman.

Brotzman declared the dust storm was due to strike here between 5 and 6 o'clock and would likely shroud the city in a mantle of murk.

Precursor of the dust wave was a lightning, hail and rain storm during which a Mt. Washington home and the Watt School were struck by lightning. A Negro was hurt by falling bricks.

STRUCK ON HEAD

Charles Johnson, Negro, of 2520 Upton street, walking near the school, was struck on the head by a brick dislodged when the lightning hit the school.

At Preble avenue and Eckert street a cable was struck by lightning.

Meanwhile, the temperature tumbled seven degrees between 1 and 2 o'clock.

Hope was expressed here that the brief rainstorm might settle some of the dust before the new storm hit the city.

Meanwhile, a barrage of hail stones as large as marbles rattled for a brief 10 minutes against the roofs of Bellevue homes today. No damage was reported.

CHOKED BY DUST

Originating on the blistered plains of the great Midwest farm belt, the duststorms choked and blinded Chicago today.

Reports from that city said that tops of Loop skyscrapers were almost invisible.

In Milwaukee the dust blew so thick that automobile lights had to be lighted, and in the Southeastern Wisconsin the dust was reported drifting like snow, banking three feet high in some spots.

GIRL KIDNAPERS SEND NEW NOTE

TUSCON, Ariz., May 10.—(AP.)—Search for the kidnapers of June Robles, six-year-old heiress, centered in Arizona today, following receipt of a second ransom note which the victim's family considered as probably authentic.

Authorities believed delivery of the second note indicated the presence in or near here of one of the abductors in addition to the self-styled contact man now detained.

An airplane was pressed into service last night by Oliver White, chief criminal deputy of Santa Cruz County, and two United States customs guards for a trip to Ajo, Ariz., 120 miles west of here. They carried a shovel, but declined to say why.

Earlier in the evening the three had made a secret motor car trip outside Nogales.

A search by Mexican authorities and cowboys in the wilds about Cananea, Sonora, for three persons and a girl, resembling the kidnap victim, led to belief the party had left that vicinity. The suspects, an American and a Mexican couple, were seen in Cananea a few hours before officers arrived to look for them.

BIG TAX BILL SIGNED BY PRESIDENT

$417,000,000 Measure Boosts Levies Upon Higher Incomes

WASHINGTON, May 10. — (AP.)—President Roosevelt added an estimated $417,000,000 today to the nation's annual revenue by signing into law the 1934 tax bill.

The act increases tax levies already amounting to $3,250,000,000 by strengthening existing law against evasion and adding new sources of income.

Plugging loopholes disclosed by the Senate Banking committee to be available to the wealthy was Congress' motive in writing the new law. But before the bill went to the White House some rates were boosted and the income tax levies revamped.

The new law provides:

Heavier taxes on higher incomes, gifts, estate transfers, corporations and personal holding companies.

Partial income tax publicity.

Elimination of consolidated returns.

Repeal of the 8 per cent normal tax on individual net incomes above $4,000 with surtaxes to start at $4,000 instead of $6,000.

A 3-cents a pound tax on Philippine cocoanut oil, the revenue to be returned to the Island treasury.

New language seeks to insure that gasoline and oil taxes are paid by the original producer.

Mr. Roosevelt affixed his signature in the presence of congressional leaders and treasury and internal revenue officers.

He will send to Congress shortly a message asking reconsideration of a tax on cocoanut oil, which he regards as unjust to the Philippine Islands.

The Mayor Firing His Director

MAYOR WILLIAM N. McNAIR — DIRECTOR HALPH E. SMITH

MAYOR AIDS JOHNSTON FACTION

Director, Marshall in New Clash; Ouster No 'Surprise'

Acting with a suddenness that stunned political circles, Mayor William N. McNair today fired Public Safety Director Ralph E. Smith and immediately appointed Archibald Marshall Beell, a social registerite, to succeed him.

The Mayor's action threw the city's most important department—from a political standpoint—into the hands of the Leslie M. Johnston-Mrs. R. Templeton Smith faction, with which Bell is aligned, almost on the eve of the primary election next Tuesday.

Announcement of the move was the signal that started another controversy between Director Smith and Supt. of Police Ben R. Marshall.

SMITH 'SURPRISED'

Told of Bell's appointment, Smith declared:

"That's the first I've heard of it."

Marshall, however, contradicted this. He said:

"Mr. Smith was informed of the Mayor's intentions yesterday."

Smith replied with a denial.

The Mayor said little in explanation of his action, which, except for it suddenness, was not unexpected.

Pressed for details, McNair said:

"Well, it's just a little change."

Later, he gave as a reason the forthcoming investigation of the Police Bureau, sponsored by Councilman John J. Kane.

Political observers, however saw a deeper meaning in the Mayor's sudden action.

At odds with the Lawrence-

LIQUOR BUREAU IN SHAKEUP

While federal agents in the Pittsburgh area today waited instructions to open a drive on bootleggers—the first since repeal—announcement of appointment of Robert Krause, of the Pittsburgh alcohol tax enforcement unit, to supervision of the Ohio-Michigan unit, was made in Washington.

Krause, whose new headquarters will be in Detroit, for several years was connected with the Pittsburgh unit of Lieut. Commander John S. Pennington's prohibition enforcement squad, serving for more than a year as agent-in-charge.

The fight against bootleggers will be carried on by agents involved in the transfer of the former prohibition enforcement service, now the Department of Justice's alcoholic beverage unit, to the liquor tax enforcement division. Leo A. Crossen will be district superintendent of the Pennsylvania-Delaware-New Jersey division.

In the general shakeup in the tax enforcement unit, J. M. Moss, head of the Pittsburgh office, will remain here, it was learned.

Catholic Fight On Birth Control Led by Bishop

The Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, Catholic bishop of Pittsburgh, today spurred a Catholic campaign against the Hastings bill, legalizing dissemination of birth control information, by himself voicing opposition to contraception.

Bishop Boyle expressed his disapproval of birth control in an exclusive interview with the Sun-Telegraph, after 773 Pittsburgh priests went on record in unanimous opposition to the Hastings measure, which has already been approved by a Senate committee.

Condemning contraception as a danger to the security of the nation, Bishop Boyle said it is "opposed by all thinking people."

Children are the natural result of marriage, he declared, and wedded couples are bound to accept such responsibilities. Of those not doing so, he said:

"They want to eat their cake and have it, too."

'ENDANGERS NATION'

Concerning the ethics involved in the problem, he asserted:

"Man has no right or power over life and death. Birth control is interference with the course of nature, and as such is a violation of both the natural and the Divine law. It's very

Those under arrest were Raymond Lohr, of Wilkinsburg; Norman Beckley, of 618 Ross avenue, Wilkinsburg, and Charles Hough, of 1173 South avenue, Wilkinsburg.

Information by Chief of Police James Harris, of Wilkinsburg, led to the arrests.

Detectives declared the arrests presaged an early solution of the bombing outrages.

A roundup of other alleged members of the gang is expected.

The dynamitings reached their climax on April 30, when four theaters were bombed, causing about $25,000 damage to the movie

Rap Schnader in Surety Corporation Collapse

The spotlight of public interest in the State Insurance Department's $5,000,000 suit against 19 directors of the defunct Pennsylvania Surety Corporation today focused upon these questions:

1—Why did the Attorney General's department, of which Gubernatorial Candidate William A. Schnader was a member, give the surety company a new lease on life January, 1930?

2—Why did Schnader refuse an independent audit of the surety company's affairs in 1931?

3—How did the First National Company of Baltimore obtain its big interest in the Pennsylvania Surety Corporation?

4—Who let $300,000 in government bonds get out of the Insurance Department's hands and back to the surety company?

These questions and many others the Sun-Telegraph set out to answer immediately the suit was filed in Common Pleas Court here against some 19 prominent

'Goat!' Cries Insull, $200,000 Bail Stands

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

CHICAGO, May 10.—Judge Will M. Sparks of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals today denied the petition of Samuel Insull for a writ of habeas corpus and remanded him in custody of the United States marshal.

This means that the court refused to reduce the Insull bond which has been fixed at $200,000 and the former public utilities king will be required to raise that sum before he can be released from the Cook County jail.

Informed of the decision as he sat, pajama clad, in the office of the jail physician, Insull's only comment was:

"Scape goat."

Then he added:

"Now that the time is drawing close for a showdown and the real facts are to be brought out in the courtroom, there is a change in public sentiment."

He suddenly checked himself. Then, with a strange mixture of humor and sarcasm, he said:

"I hold no illusions. There is no use crying about the whole matter."

In making his ruling Judge Sparks declared that the "main thing to consider" was the reasonableness of the bond to insure Insull's appearances at his forthcoming trial for alleged misuse of the mail and alleged violation of the national bankruptcy act in connection with the collapse of his $2,000,000 000 utilities empire.

MORGENTHAU, SENATE LEADERS CLASH OVER SILVER BILL

REED JIBES NRA, BOLSHEVIKS AT WASHINGTON

Ex-Senator, in Race Fo. Old Seat, Plans To Explain Facts

International News Service.

CHICAGO, May 10.—Former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, coupled announcement today of his intention to run again for the United States Senate with a double-barreled blast at the "New Deal" administration in Washington.

The Democratic leader was again the "Fightin' Jim" Reed as he criticized NRA code regulation and other features of the Roosevelt regime. He declared:

"When I voluntarily left the Senate in 1928 no prospect would have tempted me to run again.

"I don't know that I can make the grade this time, but some one has got to tell the people of these United States what is happening to them.

"These Bolsheviks at Washington have got us by the throat. And what they are attempting to do, in my judgment, doesn't even include some of the few defensible things of the Moscow regime."

The AAA program of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace can't even be described, the former Senator declared. Regarding the agricultural situation he said:

"I don't know whether the people are changing their views much, yet. But what do you suppose would happen if this drought keeps up much longer and we have a famine? A famine—after they have plowed under the cotton, reduced wheat acreage and taken the corn off the market.

"This is the first time in our history that certain gentlemen are rejoicing over a drought—over nature's curtailment of the food of the people. Think that over."

But the political situation in Missouri doesn't look very promising at present, Reed admitted. He added:

"The United States Senate is the one forum where one who believes in the philosophy of the founders can be heard on a national basis. I'm going to put it up to the free citizens of Missouri and see what they think about it."

Reed was accompanied here from Washington by his wife, the former Nell Donnelly, wealthy Kansas City dress manufacturer.

Depending On An Old Adage :-: By QUIN HALL

SMITH OUSTED BY M'NAIR

Guffey old-line Democratic faction practically ever since he took office over the matter of patronage, it appeared as an astute political move on the part of McNair on the eve of the primary elections Tuesday.

David L. Lawrence, Democratic chairman and internal revenue collector, and Joseph L. Guffey, state leader and candidate for the Democratic senatorial nomination, lent the weight of their support to the McNair campaign. He broke with them in many respects soon after election.

SLAP AT LAWRENCE

Later statements of the Mayor indicated that the break with Lawrence and Guffey was responsible, in part, at least, for Smith's dismissal.

Asked if Theodore Moritz, secretary to the Mayor, would resign as police magistrate to make a job for Smith, McNair retorted:

"He will do nothing of the kind. We are now saving the city $4,000 a year by having Moritz do the work for nothing. Let Davie Lawrence make a job for Smith. He's go ta lot of jobs down there. (The Internal Revenue Office.)

"Lawrence is working for the election of this fellow Earle for Governor, instead o me, and he's got a lot of other fellows in City Hall now who are also working for Earle."

The Mayor referred to the candidacy of George H. Earle, seeking the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, on which McNair also has an eye, seriously or not.

Thte Mayor concluded:

"You know, I'm only human after all."

SINGLE TAXER

Smith, old friend of the Mayor and advocate of the latter's single tax theories, will be out of a job in the city administration unless Council now approves his appointment to the Traction Board.

Smith probably will remain in charge of the department until Bell takes office.

Smith has clung to his job as head of the safety department, despite pressure from the Mayor recently that he resign.

Failing to secure Smith's resignation, the Mayor nominated the director to the $12,000 a year post as chairman of the Traction Conference Board. Council spurned the appointment. Council also refused to oust W. Edgar Reed from his $5,000 traction post to provide a place for Smith.

Smith and Supt. Marshall have engaged in frequent clashes. Recent reorganization of the police and fire bureaus was accomplished without Smith's advice or help.

The Mayor first named Smith as a police magistrate, later elevating him to the safety department post.

SURPRISED? 'NO'

Following notification of his ousting, Smith said:

"I'll stay until they have someone else to take my place. I have not had an official talk with anybody since the Mayor told me about it."

Asked if he was surprised at his dismissal, he answered:

"I'm past the surprise age. I'm not the Mayor and it is his administration. I solicit any investigation of my department."

The ousted safety head apparently holds no ire in his heart for his former boss, McNair. Smith and McNair posed together for news photographers in McNair's office. Smith, with a laugh, asked the photographers:

"Do you want me to slug him (McNair) while you take the picture?"

BISHOP ASSAILS BIRTH CONTROL

name—ononism—is derived from that of the sinner, Onan, who was punished by God for his offense."

A falling birth rate, Bishop Boyle said, weakens a country politically and economically. Bankers, he averred, are already pointing out the dangers involved in long term notes and loans.

BELITTLES ARGUMENTS

Belittling the eugenic and financial arguments favored by birth control advocates, he said they do not justify the practice, since artificial contraception is immoral, and as long as the means are wrong, the ends cannot justify them.

Informed that statistics of a social worker are said to indicate that 38 per cent of the persons asking for birth control information at a Pittsburgh clinic were Catholics, Bishop Boyle remarked:

"I'd like to investigate those figures some time."

Meeting in Synod Hall, Oakland, last week for their annual spring conference, the 773 Pittsburgh priests voiced opposition to the Hastings measure.

The group authorized the Very Rev. William J. McMullen, pastor of St. Paul's Cathedral, to wire Senators James J. Davis and David A. Reed, calling on them to help defeat the bill.

NAVY DEFENDS MACON'S WORTH

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP.)—On the basis of a detailed direct report from the airship Macon, Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of the Navy Bureau of Areronautics, said today the airship's mission in the present Caribbean fleet maneuvers "had been a success.

Simultaneously, Secretary of Navy Swanson issued a formal statement in connection with widely circulated reports (not carried by the Associated Press) that the Navy considered the airship a "failure." He said:

"There is no basis whatever for any statement to the effect that the Macon was damaged other than theoretically or that the Navy Department has reached a decision as to the usefulness of dirigibles."

Homewood to Get State Rum Store

Approval of a site for a new state liquor store for the Homewood and Brushton area was announced today.

As soon as alterations are completed, the new store will be opened at 710 North Homewood avenue.

The control board acted on selection of a new store for this district after petitions signed by 2,000 residents had been presented.

PRESIDENT ASKS LAWYERS' AID IN CRIME WAR

Hughes Makes Appeal To Public to Help In Enforcement

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt suggested to the American Law Institute today that it study America's criminal law with a view to recommending how it could be adapted "to meet the needs of a modern complex civilization."

The President, in a message to the institute, congratulated it for the work along similar lines it has done with civil law. He said:

"I wish, therefore, to take the liberty of suggesting that, while you continue to carry forward the clarification and simplification of what we lawyers call the private civil law, serious consideration should be given to whether you should not now begin an undertaking of equal importance in the field of substantive criminal law.

"There is an urgent need for intelligent, painstaking and patriotic work in this field."

HUGHES MAKES PLEA

An appeal to the public to insist upon law enforcement was made by Chief Justice Hughes in an address to the institute.

The chief justice said:

"The primary need is a robust civil sentiment, dominated by a sense of justice, which demands intelligence in the making of laws and impartiality in their execution, which is the determined foe of graft and every form of official delinquency as well as of outstanding breaches of the criminal law.

"To cultivate and reinforce this public sentiment, all social agencies must play their part."

BAR 'RESPONSIBLE'

Heaviest responsibility was on the bar, he said, and there was difficulty "in securing the cooperation of the most learned, enlightened and experienced members of the bar in meeting that responsibility."

Improvement in the administration of criminal justice was essential, he asserted, in protecting "the foundations of the security of society."

NYE MAY ASK PROBE OF NRA

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Senatorial investigation of NRA will be asked unless the Darrow report attacking the Blue Eagle organization is madep ublic, Senator Nye (Rep.), of North Dakota, announced today. He said:

"The statement attributed to the President that the report is too voluminous for immediate digest is ridiculous. Mr. Darrow has informed me that the report is but 6,000 words in length, and no one ever before acused Mr. Darrow of lacking ability in expressing himself.

"Unless it is made public, the only recourse will be to seek senatorial investigation of NRA by a Senate committee to report to the Senate only. That will be done if there is much more delay."

The Real Question

By ROBERT H. HEMPHILL
Financial Authority.

THE CENTRAL purpose of the silver legislation now holding the spotlight of interest in Washington is to restore the prices of 1926 by increasing the monetary base and the VOLUME OF CURRENCY IN CIRCULATION.

THIS IS THE REAL DOMESTIC ISSUE.

The advocates or opponents will talk about silver, but beneath the technicalities will be the desire either to restore prosperity to this nation or to delay our recovery.

A DECIDED majority of both houses of Congress is in favor of effective silver remonetization and the issuance and distribution of the certificates.

A majority of the people of this country want remonetization of silver.

It is not a hazy question they do not understand.

They firmly believe more money in circulation will increase our prosperity, and this view is held by every sound economist, scientist and philosopher of ancient or modern times.

TRUE or not, however, the majority of citizens of this country believes it, and we are supposed to have a government of and by the people.

Against this majority sentiment is a small but well defined, compact and powerful opposition determined at any cost either to defeat this legislation or to render it ineffective by some clever device.

This opposition is unquestionably directed by the English central banking group, which is determined to retain control of world monetary affairs, which effective remonetization of silver would unquestionably upset.

THIS IS THE INTERNATIONAL ISSUE.

THE SIGNIFICANT question involved is whether the influence or propaganda of a powerful international group can control the policy of this nation against well-defined desire and judgment of a majority of our citizens.

It has done so in the past. It may do so again.

TRIO ARRESTED IN BOMBINGS

houses and adjoining business establishments.

THEATERS BOMBED

Theaters bombed then were the New Oakland Theater, 213-15 Atwood street, Oakland; Atlas Theater, 2603 Perrysville avenue, North Side; Arcadia Theater, 823-25 East Ohio street, North Side; Colony Theater, 720 Broadway, Stowe Township.

Previously harmless phosphorous bombs had been discharged in the Regal and Welland theaters, Wilkinsburg, and the New Carnegie and Liberty theaters, Carnegie.

Meanwhile, the second bombing within two days in Glassport today damaged the homes of Pasquale (Patsy) Yocco, at 419 Iowa street, and his daughter, Mrs. Mary Montauti, adjoining, and shattered windows in the neighborhood.

FAMILY ESCAPES

Yocco, his wife and five children and Mrs. Montauti, her husband and 10-month-old daughter, Lydia, escaped unhurt.

Chief D. J. George investigating the blast said Yocco had been arrested two years ago for maintaining and operating a still. Until recently his son-in-law drove a truck for a wholesale beer dealer. Yocco broke ground yesterday for a new building at 526 Monongahela avenue.

Police said Yocco could not explain the bombing. He said he had received no threatening letters.

The interior of the Yocco and Montauti homes were damaged.

M'LEOD BACKERS REJECT 'DEAL'

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Leaders in the fight for the McLeod closed bank depositors pay-off bill today rejected proposals to involve them in a political trade in the House.

Instead, Representative McLeod (Rep.), of Michigan, said the appeal for aid to bank depositors w" be carried on solely on its merits.

McLeod denied an alliance had been formed with backers of the Frazier-Lemke "greenback" farm mortgage refinancing measure whereby forces would be joined to obtain a vote on both measures in the House on May 28.

Reports were rife among administration forces that an "anti-administration bloc" was to be formed in behalf of the bills. McLeod said:

"There is nothing to that. We are basing our fight solely on the merits of the legislation."

While the petition for a vote on the McLeod bill still was short slightly more than 30 names, its backers were confident of a "break" in the situation which will assure them of their House vote. The petition requires 145 signatures.

ELECTION CASE GOES TO JURY

The trial of three members of the election board of the Third District, Third Ward, in Federal Court went to the jury today.

The defendants are Joseph Forte, judge of elections; Frank Audia, inspector, and August J. Manfredo, clerk. All are charged with conspiring to alter and falsify ballots cast for candidates for federal offices at the general election in November, 1932.

Immediately after the case went to the jury another trial—the fourteenth involving election cases—got under way.

Defendants are five members of the election board of the Second District, Second Ward: Thomas O'Malley, judge of the board and a brother of Patrick J. O'Malley, Republican leader; John Barosky and Earl Longo, inspectors, and Floyd Kawka and Stanley Carlowski, clerks.

Former United States Attorney Louis E. Graham, appointed a special prosecutor to assist in the election cases, made the opening address.

TREASURY HEAD CHARGED WITH 'BAD FAITH'

Roosevelt Faces Task Of Breaking Deadlock

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—President Roosevelt was faced today with the task of compromising an impasse between Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Senate silver leaders over the drafting of the administration's new silver legislation.

Silver bloc leaders privately charged the Cabinet officer with "bad faith" in refusing to carry out the President's promise to them for a government declaration in favor of using silver as primary money alongside gold.

Armed with this pledge, the silverites expected a prompt agreement on legislation, only to find Morgenthau adamant against such a declaration and in favor of a stilted statement that such a course was the "sense of Congress."

ROLE OF PEACEMAKER

The President was cast in the role of peacemaker when Senate leaders demanded that Morgenthau lay both their proposals and his own before Mr. Roosevelt for a decision. They expected the President to support their stand. If he failed to do so, the bloc leaders were ready to declare war and start a battle in the Senate for mandatory remonetization of silver.

The declaration of silver policy, favored by the bloc, was drawn by Senators William E. Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, and Key Pittman (Dem.), of Nevada. It read:

"It is the declared purpose of the United States to restore, establish and maintain silver as the primary money and a monetary base for specie and currency issue."

MORGENTHAU BLAMED

Morgenthau refused to incorporate it in the administration bill.

Borah and Pittman also drafted a provision for mandatory purchase of silver to carry out this policy.

Virtually every member of the silver bloc blamed Morgenthau for the impasse. They reported Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the Treasury, was "thoroughly in accord" with the bloc's aims, but that Morgenthau refused to concede a point to the silverites. One silverite said:

"The President had better curb his Secretary of the Treasury, or there will be as pretty a legislative war as Congress ever has seen."

He also expressed the opinion that industrial codes were "being overdone."

YOUNG FRENCH "royalists," who like to think themselves descendants of the nobility, which more than ninety per cent of them are not, and call themselves "king's henchmen," recently distinguished themselves by attacking a woman, the well-known Madame Caillaux, driving her from a speaker's platform.

Such were not the manners of French kings. Louix XIV, arrogant, vain, incompetent, was not much to brag about. But when he met the humblest scrub woman in his palace, he would remove his hat and bow, because she was a woman.

Roosevelt Delivering a Million

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT DELIVERING A $1,000,000 CHECK TO WARM SPRINGS FOUNDATION

The scene at the White House as President Roosevelt delivered to officers of the Warm Springs Foundation (for the treatment of infantile paralysis), his favorite charity, a check for more than $1,000,000—the proceeds of the Roosevelt birthday balls held in many cities of the country a few months ago. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

NRA Officials Paving Way for Retreat

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP.)—An early abandonment of attempts to supervise every little business in the land was definitely indicated today by NRA.

Badgered and burdened with petty code differences, Hugh S. Johnson's chief aides are studying the ground for retreat along this line. In guarded utterances, officials admit a definite reaction against wholesale code writing and policing.

They foresee some difficulty, however, in extricating themselves.

Almost unanimously they want to quit supervising strictly local service trades, such as pressing shops, barbers and bootblacks. An increasing number of officials want to junk complicated price maintenance and cost finding provisions which are giving trouble in many codes.

Two things, however, stand in the way: First, trade association groups which demanded and obtained codes so as to extend their influence over unorganized competition, are fighting hard to hold this ground.

Second, labor in miscellaneous trades, almost unable to organize and act in concert, is ready to object mightily at being left to fend for itself.

Roosevelt Gets Million For Fight on Disease

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP.)—A million dollar check, written by the hundreds of Roosevelt birthday parties, was put to work today for a three-way attack on infantile paralysis.

Into the check—three feet long and for exactly $1,003,030.08—went the proceeds of the gay dances given throughout the nation in observance of the President's birthday last January.

President Roosevelt received the big check last night in the East Room of the White House in the presence of persons who organized the parties. He remarked with a smile that he was nervous in handling a check so large, adding:

"I never saw one before."

Then he turned it over to trustees of the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation with an announcement it would be plit into:

"A $100,000 fund to be used nationally "to stimulate and further meritorious work . . . in the field of infantile paralysis."

A $650,000 fund to further "present work done by the foundation's institution at Warm Springs, Ga."

A $253,030.08 fund "for building, maintenance and contingencies of the foundation."

On behalf of the national birthday committee, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, retired, gave Mr. Roosevelt the check as "the outpouring of the heart of America."

DR. BOYD'S OUSTER SPLITS RITZY TUESDAY MUSICAL

CHORAL WOMEN PROTEST LOSS OF DIRECTOR

Feminine Leader Will Succeed Noted Musician

Members of Pittsburgh's select Tuesday Musical Club choral were said to be "all upset" today over the dismissal of Dr. Charles N. Boyd, director for the last 16 years.

Dr. Boyd—known to hundreds of music lovers here—was dismissed by the organization's board of directors. He said he received notice at the club's annual luncheon at the University Club on Tuesday.

PRESIDENT EXPLAINS

Mrs. David V. Murdoch, of 5914 Wellesley avenue, president of the Tuesday Musical Club, explained his dismissal, saying:

"Since it is a women's organization we feel we want a woman director for a change, although Dr. Boyd was admired by all the members and did marvelous work."

Mrs. Charles H. Aufhammer, of 1230 Farragut street, who has just ended her term as chairman of the choral and as a member of the club's board, said:

"The choral is dissatisfied over Dr. Boyd's dismissal. A protest was made last Friday, but the board did not change its former action."

A similar statement was made by Mrs. Elsie Breese Mitchell, of 1106 North Highland avenue, publicity chairman of the club and also the choral's pianist. She stated:

"The choral is unanimous in wanting to have him stay and feels resentful over what has happened. It is all upset."

DR. BOYD MUM

Dr. Boyd, who is also a director and teacher at the Pittsburgh Musical Institute, said of his dismissal at his home at 237 Lothrop street:

"I don't know a thing about it. The board can tell you more than I can. I'm out."

The musical club's board is composed of 24 members. The choral consists of 66 women, many of whom are prominent in Pittsburgh society.

Mrs. Murdoch said that a successor to Dr. Boyd probably would not be named "perhaps for several weeks."

Caught in Tragedy

JULIUS NELSON COMFORTING HIS YOUNG WIFE, ALLIE

The Nelsons, caught in the tragedy that meant for their young friend, Mrs. Kenneth A. Hamm, suicide—because of her husband's attachment for Mrs. Nelson. Mr. Nelson told Chicago investigators that he knew of the association, hoped that it would "blow over" soon. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

STORY OF WIFE SUICIDE OVER RIVAL BARED

Widower Tells of Ride With 'Other Woman' In Love Mixup

CHICAGO, May 10.—(AP.)—A young wife, dead by her own hand, supplied the answer last night to a question two young couples whose love lives were enmeshed had asked themselves:

"How will it all end?"

The husband of the dead woman and the other couple told a Coroner's jury of the events which they believed caused Mrs. Etna Hamm, 25, to fire a bullet into her head last night.

The widower, Kenneth A. Hamm, who studies journalism evenings at Northwestern University, said he and his wife had often discussed his free love theories and his friendship with Mrs. Allie Nelson, 25, wife of a friend.

Yesterday Mrs. Hamm returned to her apartment and found Kenneth and Mrs. Nelson together. She offered to leave, but they told her to stay and that they would go.

HOW WILL IT END?

Hamm explained:

"We drove for a couple of hours in Jackson Park. We discussed what would become of all of us. We asked ourselves, 'How is it going to end?'"

Mrs. Nelson repeated Hamm's story.

Then Nelson, in a subdued voice, disclosed that Hamm's affection for Mrs. Nelson had been no secret to him. Nelson said:

"I've known the Hamms for five years, ever since we met at a reunion of the alumni of the college we all attended at Chillicothe, Mo. I first knew of it a month ago when he told me Allie would come to him when he said the word. I didn't believe it. We never talked about it since, but I have gone through tortures wondering 'how is it going to end?'"

"I LOVE HER NOW!"

Nelson said the young widower was a romantic character trying to live the short stories he wrote and unable to distinguish between facts and imagination. Hamm, he said, was interested in psychology and often talked about free love, but Nelson thought it was a lot of "bosh."

His arm around the slight figure of his wife, Nelson declared:

"I have always loved my wife. I love her now. I always will."

The three stories heard, the jury in routine fashion wrote:

"Suicide while temporarily insane, due to domestic troubles."

COLLEGE GIRLS REBEL AGAINST 'SPYING' DEAN

Ban on 'Risque' Songs, Entwined Arms Stirs Hunter Protest

By DOROTHY ROE
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, May 10.—"We're not Maedchen in uniform—we're just normal, healthy, average college girls who object to being moulded on the pattern of yesterday."

That was the cry of Hunter College girls today as the school buzzed with excitement over the action of 20 young women students who marched down to City Hall with formal complaints against the strict regulations of Acting Dean Hannah M. Egan.

They objected to her reprimanding friendly girls who strolled down the halls with entwined arms, and they resented what they called the "Hunter College tradition."

PROTEST APPOINTMENT

The fact that Acting Dean Egan frowns on thin blouses, lipstick and lacquered fingernails was called "beside the point" by an earnest young student leader, who said:

"After all, we're all part of a changing world, and the students of today can't be expected to think the same thoughts and cling to the same customs that marked the standards of Hunter College girls of a generation ago.

"It's not those petty things that we object to—it's the whole attitude of limiting student freedom, of trying to regulate student dress, of even telling us what to think and what to say, just because we're students."

The 20 indignant students who called on Aldermanic President Bernard S. Deutsch in city hall made it clear they wanted to protest against the possible designation of Dr. Egan as permanent dean when the board of trustees meets today to select a shepherdess for the flock.

BANNED 'RISQUE' SONGS

Long brewing dissatisfaction with the alleged restraints and "red tape" of life in Hunter College boiled over last week at the time of the annual school "sing," according to varoius students, one of whom said:

"The girls simply decided it was too much when Dean Egan banned some of the songs. She called them risque.

"There was one song that rhymed prohibition with inhibition. The dean wouldn't stand for that, and yet it was the kind of song you hear over the radio every day."

Dean Egan refused to make any statement on the subject, announcing merely that "the matter is in higher hands."

CHARGE 'SPY' SYSTEM

Charges that Dean Egan used a "spy" system to check up on student activities received no official comment. But the girls, clustered in corridors, staunchly refused to disclose the identity of the champions of their cause. They said:

"What we really need is a married dean who doesn't expect all college girls to act like old maid school teachers."

DANCE GOES ON AS HOTEL BURNS

'Smoke Gets in Your Eyes,' Band Blares As 'Nero' Fiddles

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP.)—"On with the dance!" cried a gay young blade at yesterday's matinee dansant in Roseland ballroom, while firemen chopped a hole in the dance floor to fight a fire that raged—for lack of a better word—in the restaurant below.

The orchestra leader, learned in the tradition of his calling—which is to the effect that the band must play on, come weal, come woe—tapped his baton gingerly on his music rack and said:

"Boys, we do our part. One, two, three—play!"

SMOKE IN YOUR EYES

The orchestra began to play practically simultaneously, and extra loud.

Smoke began to curl through the hole in the dance floor, whereupon the musicians switched into "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes." It was nothing less than an inspiration.

Some of the dancers, conscious that the firemen were swinging their axes noisily without any regard for the music, were minded to suggest that they speed up or else let the band slow down; but nothing came of it.

'HELLO, NERO!'

One of the brighter of the dancers caught the violinist's eye and cried out gayly:

"Hello, Nero."

As he danced quickly away, another wag of the same ilk shouted:

"What's your hurry? Going to a fire?"

This was thought to be a very smart sally.

Downstairs, where the fire had started from an undetermined cause, about 20 diners who had reached the dessert course became alarmed. They dashed out, stimulating hysteria and forgetting the usual formality at the cashier's deck—although all remembered to take their hats.

ELLIOTT'S BABY NAMED RUTH

FORT WORTH, Tex., May 10.—(AP.)—A 6 pound 6 ounce daughter born yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, son and daughter-in-law of the President, has been named Ruth Chandler Roosevelt.

The name was selected "some time ago" by the mother, Elliott Roosevelt said, while the hospital reported both the mother and the child were "doing nicely."

Roosevelt said he is definitely "set" on the idea there will be no pictures of the baby. He cited kidnaping threats against prominent children as a reason, and added:

"The least said about the baby, the better."

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP.)—President and Mrs. Roosevelt today had sent congratulations to their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, upon the birth of a daughter.

The child is the fifth grandchild of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

DOWLING BRIDE 'SPANKED'

LOS ANGELES, May 10.—(AP.)—The sudden announcement that R. C. (Dapper Dan) Dowling had married the complaining witness in a kidnaping charge against him brought furrows on legal brows today.

Judge Fletcher Bowron of Superior Court took time out to decide whether to dismiss the charge based on Mrs. Marjorie Crawford Wellman's accusation that the studio dance director had forced her to accompany him to Yuma, Ariz., against her will.

At his arraignment in the court, Dowling had pleaded not guilty and announced that he and Mrs. Wellman, former actress, were married a week ago.

This turn of the case displeased Buron Fitts, District Attorney. He moved for dismissal and then carried out his promise to give the bride a talking to. He told her:

"I think you have played a dispicable trick on your husband, the District Attorney, and the taxpayers of this county. This whole affair has been a cheap and humiliating publicity scheme."

Chewing Gum Worth $20,000 Hijacked

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP.)—A truck, loaded with chewing gum valued at $20,000, was stolen in a holdup by two bandits on West Eighteenth street yesterday.

DIVES FOR OARS, DIES IN RIVER

Owen Ford, 45, brother of the late police inspector, John J. Ford, was drowned in the Monongahela River last night when he dived into the water to recover the oars of his skiff, according to a Coroner's report.

Two rivermen witnessed the accident and notified River Patrolman Charles Snyder, who recovered the body a half hour later. According to the witnesses, Ford leaped from the boat after undressing, swam about 30 feet and sank. He lived on a house boat at the foot of Second street.

The body of an unidentified man was recovered in the Ohio River near Island avenue by Patrolman Snyder last night. The body had been in the water about four days, deputy coroners said.

DILLINGER CLUE HINTS DEATH

By THOMAS F. CULLEN
International News Service.

CHICAGO, May 10.—John Dillinger, phantom Indiana fugitive, was believed by many police officials here to be dead or dying today in some remote hideout as the greatest manhunt in the history of the United States reached a virtual standstill.

After more than two weeks of the most intensive search ever directed at a criminal, police and federal agents today had run out all the existing clues to the hoodlum's whereabouts and were inclined to the belief that he received the bullet that seriously wounded someone when deputy sheriffs at South St. Paul, Minn., fired on the stolen automobile in which Dillinger and two of his henchmen were escaping from Little Bohemia Lodge, near Mercer, Wis., on April 23.

Officers said it has been established that Dillinger has not been seen since April 23, when he was identified at South St. Paul, although George (Baby Face) Nelson, one of his henchmen, was reported at Duluth, Minn., while Tommy Carroll, another of the gang, was seen near Mercer, Wis., and Homer Van Meter was identified as one of the bandits that held up a bank in Fostoria, O.

Missing Explorer Found in Iceland

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, May 10.—(AP.)—Anxiety for the safety of the Danish explorer, Dr. Nielsen, and three companions was relieved today by a report that the little party had arrived safely at Kalfafell.

The party started April 27 to study recent volcanic activity in the interior of Iceland.

Children of 1934 'Too Modern' for Circus Parade!

BUTLER, Pa., May 10.—(AP.)—Deciding "modern kids are too sophisticated for that sort of thing," the Board of Education refused to grant school children a recess to see a circus parade.

There was a stormy protest from the pupils in which Director Ralph E. Forsythe joined.

The old custom will be revived. The "kids" will see the next parade.

DICKEY SETTLES SCHOOL STRIKE

Agreeing to arbitration, 100 Neville Junior High School students returned to their classes today after a two-day strike protesting the dropping of three of their teachers.

Charles E. Dickey, County School Superintendent, entered the controversy between students and school board last night in the role of "peacemaker." He attended a meeting at the school of students, teachers, board members and parents.

Failure of the board to renew contracts of Miss Martha Willard, Miss Twilla Johnston and Mrs. Grace Constantine has caused two student walkouts since May 1.

In returning to their classes today, students warned that if Supt. Dickey's hearings were delayed too long they would again go on strike.

SUED, HE CALLS WIFE 'HONEY'

As his own counsel, Herbert J. Youngst, Hazewood insurance man, caled his wife "honey" today while questioning her in her suit for divorce before Judge Thomas M. Marshall.

Mrs. Julia Youngst, the wife, told Judge Marshall her husband mistreated her and failed to provide for her.

The young husband protested, avowed his love for his wife and pleaded another chance.

Judge Marshall instructed the two to try to patch up their troubles, informing the wife that if they couldn't agree he would grant her a divorce.

STAR INJURED MAKING FILM

HOLLYWOOD, May 10.—(AP.)—A comedy situation at the Hal Roach studio failed to turn out today so humorously for Patsy Kelly, featured comedienne, playing with Thelma Todd in "I'll Be Suing You."

The plot called for Miss Kelly to go to bed, place her leg through a hole in the bed to "fool an insurance claim adjuster" when he arrived.

The cameras were cranking away on the scene when the bed collapsed—pinning Miss Kelly's leg underneath, possibly breaking it. She was taken to a hospital.

RUNAWAYS END FLIGHT IN N. Y.

In New York City's Pennsylvania station police early today found Helen McGuire, 13, and her nine-year-old brother, Paul, who vanished yesterday from their home, 405 Forty-first street, with $55 of their parents' rent money, police reported.

The children were reported missing yesterday afternoon. So was the money. It was learned they had not attended school. The money, according to the parents, had been hidden.

Lost in the New York terminal, they told police of that city they were to meet an aunt. Police took them into custody and telephoned Pittsburgh police.

New York police were asked to determine whether the amount of money the children had left would be sufficient for a homeward journey. The children's father said he was unable to forward additional funds. They had $11 of the $55 remaining.

BATTLE HOURS TO SAVE TWINS

Integnational News Service.

NEW YORK, May 10.—All during the night and in the early hours of today nine husky policemen held death at arm's length.

In the small Brooklyn flat of a jobless clerk, the officers, members of Emergency Squad 13, worked with oxygen inhalators over two 6-month-old twin boys, who are ill with pneumonia.

The twins, Ross and Roy, are the sons of Peter Barry, who was formerly a clerk, but who has been unemployed for some time.

When medical science was unable to do anything more for the boys the police squad was called in and asked to help keep the twins alive.

The officers, working in relays, are prepared to struggle all day with the inhalators in order to save the twins.

GARBO 'DOUBLE' DIES BY POISON

International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, May 10.—Disappointment over her failure to attain stardom in pictures caused "Greta Garbo's double," Sigrun Solvason, 28, movie extra, to commit suicide by swallowing poison, police reported today.

The body clad in green pajamas that set off her blonde beauty was found in her studio apartment by radio police summoned by neighbors alarmed when they failed to see her for several days.

There was no money in the apartment.

Miss Solvason's estranged husband, Frederick Hessert, from whom she had been separated six years, said:

"She had always stated she would be as great a star as Greta Garbo if she had a chance. She was of that blonde Nordic type.

"She died pursuing the will of the wisp of stardom. It wrecked our married life. Now it has killed her."

Spring Hill's Children Seeing an Airplane

SPRING HILL CHILDREN MAKING A CLOSE STUDY OF AN AIRPLANE . . . . . IT WAS FORCED DOWN BY MOTOR TROUBLE

Hespenheide hillside, Spring Hill, on which Steve Petovich, 35, flying near his home, was forced down in his small plane. He repaired the damage, took off, leaped out as the plane crashed. He was unhurt, the ship wrecked. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

Aviator Crashes Twice In Hour on Spring Hill

C. D. Doak, aeronautical inspector of Western Pennsylvania, today was investigating the disappearance of an airplane that crashed twice on Spring Hill last night.

According to Doak, the pilot, Steve Petrovich, who gave his address as 150 Overbeck street, is not licensed.

When Doak visited the scene of the double crash to probe the causes, there was no trace of the plane and the pilot could not be located.

Petrovich, while flying over the city late yesterday, developed a knock in his motor and attempted a landing on a hilltop in the Spring Hill district.

In bringing down the plane on the rough surface of Hespenheide Hill, the flier cracked his landing gear.

After fixing the repaired section of his ship, Petrovich started the motor, and through a lane of bystanders who had assembled, speeded up the hillside.

Gaining momentum, the ship left the ground, but at a height of 30 feet, it faltered, swung over, and crashed up-side-down to the ground, wings spread across a gulley into which the pilot tumbled head first.

Petrovich exhibited only a scratched chin and bruised arm as the result of his second crack-up.

The flier, who is a roofer by trade, said he had flown here from Butler, and was about to return to that city when his motor began knocking.

COUNTY PROBES RELIEF WORK REFUSAL

An investigation to run down rumors that many men preferred to remain "on relief" instead of accepting jobs on the government work programs is in progress today.

This was disclosed by George P. Mills, executive director of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board, after county officials recommended appointment of a personnel clearance director to check on such refusals in the future by men assigned to county jobs.

Between 15 and 20 per cent of the men assigned work on the government programs under the Civil Works and Relief Work Division programs failed to show up, Philip H. Lantz, deputy RWD director, stated.

TO INVESTIGATE ABSENCE

Since the work programs were launched hastily in both cases, there was no time to check on the reasons why the men did not appear, he said.

Simultaneous with the launching of the RWD program tomorrow, efforts will be made to determine the cause for a man's non-appearance.

The checking, it was learned, will be undertaken at the specific request of Mills, who has been quietly investigating the failure of workers to report in the past.

FEW REFUSALS, CHECK SHOWS

Early reports, Mills said, indicate a very small percentage refused to accept CWA or RWD work because they would rather remain on relief. He stated:

"We just finished a list of 75 failures to report for work and found just one case of a man who stayed away because he would rather be on relief.

"The others had perfectly justifiable reasons. Some were sick or had illness at home; others lived so far from the jobs they couldn't get there."

Mills praised the county's plan of appointing a personnel director and promised "action" on cases reported to him as direct refusal to work. He intimated they would be cut off relief, if men were able-bodied and no extenuating circumstances were found to exist.

TO KEEP JOBS MANNED

Appointment of the county's personnel director was recommended to keep RWD jobs for the county fully manned and to get new men on the job when others fail to appear, according to T. O. Hasley, county planning director.

Hasley, A. M. Marion and Ray Sprigle, directors, and E. L. Schmidt, engineer, recommended the appointment after a meeting yesterday. Schmidt said:

"Our recommendation will be submitted to the County Commissioners today and we hope they will immediately appoint a director."

"A few thousands" of RWD workers, laid off two weeks ago, will be rehired as the RWD program goes forward, Lantz said. Of the county government's 72 projects, 34 have been approved. Defending the families on relief, officials of the Community Fund declared:

"They are, in the main, good, honest, self-respecting families, most of whom have given long faithful service to business and always supported themselves."

Homestead Estate Goes to Children

The will of Thomas W. Noroski, Homestead, filed for probate today divides a $7,000 estate between his wife and six children. The wife receives a half interest in a Munhall butcher shop and a fourth of his real estate. Mrs. Noroski and a son, Leo F. Noroski, were named executors.

ICKES MEDIATES IN GAS STRIKE

CLEVELAND, May 10.—(AP.)—The entrance of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes into the Cleveland gasoline strike situation with a peace proposal left the next move up to the union attendants today.

It also had the effect of bringing directly a delay in a threatened gasoline strike in the Akron district, but an increase in acts of vandalism against Cleveland gasoline stations was reported last night.

Prospects of a general strike in Toledo were raised last night at a meeting of the executive boards of all unions in the Toledo Central Labor Union. Such a move was discussed, but it was indicated it first must be determined whether a general strike would be necessary to protect trade unions, now on strike against defeat.

GARBAGE WAGON STRIKE ENDS

Normal garbage collection service was restored to the North Side today following settlement of a strike involving drivers, according to officials of the Allegheny Garbage Company.

About 20 drivers had been on strike since Monday, the company said. During that time collections were restricted.

B. H. Hill, chief clerk in the Department of Health, declared the health of the community was not endangered because emergency collections had been maintained.

Curtiss Workers Warned to Return

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 10.—(AP.)—An ultimatum to return to work by tomorrow afternoon or have their names stricken from the company rolls was given to striking workers of the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Company Inc., today, by company officials.

Aeronautical workers from both the Curtiss plant and the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation have been on strike for six weeks.

Strike Paralyzes Harbors on Coast

SAN FRANCISCO, May 10.—(INS.)—More than 10,000 longshoremen were on strike in Pacific Coast ports today for $1 an hour pay and a 30-hour week.

The strike extended from San Diego to Seattle with shipping virtually at a standstill in all harbors including the large ones here and at Los Angeles.

STRIKE TIES UP RAND PLANTS

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 10.—(AP.)—The 6,000 striking employes of the Remington Rand typewriter plants at Syracuse and Ilion, N. Y., Middletown, Conn., and Norwood, O., and the executive of the company today stood their ground firmly—the strikers refusing to return to work and the employers threatening to handle all orders in their European plants.

The strike arose, according to V. M. Crofoot, president of the Syracuse Typewriter Workers Union, over the company's refusal to recognize the union.

James H. Rand, Jr., of Buffalo, president of the company, said:

"At a meeting before the National Labor Board last Saturday, complete agreement was reached between employes and management, except that union organizers insisted that the word union be inserted in three places. This the company holds unreasonable and unnecessary, and not required by law or by the provisions of the NIRA."

Cold Cuts and sandwiches need Gulden's mustard

The mellow Gulden blend of choicest mustard seeds and delicious spices makes cold cuts and sandwiches much more enjoyable. Gulden's Mustard is so rich in flavor that nothing can compare with it as a relish for these popular foods.

EXCITED?

You bet! We've got the NEW "G-3"

COME in and see it—the tire that licks the problem of rapid tread-wear!

"G-3" is its name—just an engineer's symbol for the tread that stood up under the toughest punishment the Goodyear test fleet ever gave a tire.

They pounded it over the roads day and night—starting, speeding, stopping—frazzling brakes and wracking cars. And when the reports were in, the "G-3" All-Weather was the winner!

It kept its grip twice as long as competitive tires—gives 43% more non-skid mileage than any previous Goodyear All-Weather!

What a tire! It's the only tire that can keep its non-skid mileage on quick-starting—fast-running—quick-stopping modern cars. And that means more safety—longer non-skid wear on any car.

It costs more to build—but you can buy it today at no extra cost!

Here's what you get in Goodyear's new "G-3"!

You get the broader road contact of a flatter, wider All-Weather Tread.

You get quicker-stopping and the greater road grip of more non-skid blocks in the center.

You get the easy steering and smooth travel of wider riding-ribs.

You get the slow, even wear of closer-nested non-skid blocks and ribs.

You get more rubber in the tread, an average of two pounds more per tire.

—all of which adds up to 43% MORE NON-SKID MILEAGE at no extra cost to you!

MOTHER HERE WINS BATTLE FOR SON, 6

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—Mother-love was given precedence over the claims of a father for the custody of a 6-year-old boy, by Judge Thomas Bluett in Domestic Relations Court here.

In turning the child over to his mother, Mrs. Claire Mark, 30, of 2214 Beechwood boulevard, Pittsburgh, the court yesterday declared:

"A mother is entitled to a young child if she is a fit and proper person."

Mrs. Mark testified that her husband, Joseph, 34, proprietor of a garage in suburban Melrose Park, took their son, Adolph, from her Pittsburgh home three weeks ago on the pretense of taking the boy to a movie. She testified:

"We seperated amicably in January after several quarrels and I returned to my mother's home in Pittsburgh to think things over. I decided not to return to my husband because he had made life unbearable."

In granting the mother custody of the boy, the court ordered that arrangements be made for Mark to see the child.

BATTLES BLAZE NEAR GAS TANK

Fellow bus drivers and passengers today praised the heroism of James Joyce, 235 Birmingham avenue.

After ushering his passengers to safety, Joyce crawled under his New York-bound bus when it caught fire near a large gasoline tank at the intersection of Allegheny and North avenues, North Side, to fight the blaze with a small hand extinguisher.

Firemen gave his minor burns first aid and put out the fire with chemicals. Damage was slight.

Passengers continued their journey in another bus.

Revenue Agents Raid Station Street Cafe

The fifth raid since prohibition was repealed was made last night on Carmen Logiodice's restaurant at 6308 Station street. Made by state revenue agents, it was the second raid within a week.

Logiodice was arrested and a quantity of illegal liquor was seized, the agents reported.

ROLLER SKATER HURT BY AUTO

Dorothy Berry, 11, of 1414 Gironde street, was in St. John's Hospital with a skull fracture today, suffered last night when she was struck by an automobile while roller skating in Sigel street.

The driver, who police said was Mrs. Louise Kline, of 201 Locust street, Emsworth, was released in $1,000 bond.

Three-year-old William Leslie, of 722 Parker street, was injured seriously last night when a parked automobile under which he had crawled, started and dragged him. The child's clothing became entangled on the rear axle. Police reported that the driver, W. Harry Eary, of Terra Alta, W. Va., went nearly a block before he realized the boy was under his car.

Joseph Ackerman, 48, of 2367 South Eighteenth street, and James Abbott, 27, of 2420 Gable street, were injured yesterday when a truck forced the automobile in which they were riding into the girder of the Pennsylvania Railroad Bridge in Arlington avenue, near East Carson street, police reported. John Mahoney, of 2369 South Eighteenth street, driver of the automobile, and Leonard Griffith, the truck driver, were arrested, according to police.

LOAN TO CLOSED BANK SAPPROVED

A 59 per cent dividend to depositors of the closed Real Estate and Trust Company, North Side, is expected shortly following authorization of collateral for a loan of $1,555,000 by Judge Thomas M. Marshall.

A court order permitting use of the bank's frozen assets as security for the loan, to be obtained from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, was issued yesterday by Judge Marshall to Deputy Attorney General David Glick, appearing for Secretary of Banking William D. Gordon, receiver for the institution.

An immediate loan of $1,400,000 would be made, Glick said. The dividend would be paid within the next three or four weeks, he declared.

Orders permitting Gordon to secure $182,000 for the Merchants Savings and Trust Company, Tarentum, as receiver for both institutions, also were issued by Judge Marshall.

HITLER HAILED AS DIVINE AID

BERLIN, May 10.—(AP.)—The belief that Jesus has become powerful among the Germans because of Adolf Hitler has been advanced by Nazi German Christians of Brunswick.

In their official organ, the Brunswick Protestant, Nazis put forward the following thesis:

"In Hitler, time has been fulfilled for the German people, for Christ, who is God's helper and the Savior, has through Hitler become powerful among us.

"Hence, Nazism has a positive Christianity of deeds. Hitler is now the way of the spirit and the will of God leading to the Christian church of German nations."

WOMEN JOINING RACE FOR EPIC ON RUSHMORE

Just as women took their part in the pioneer days of America's epic, so are the women of today playing an important part in the nationwide competition through which is sought the story of the country's history for the final inscription on the Mount Rushmore National Memorial.

National and sectional women's organizations have assumed a place of leadership in the quest of a suitable version of America's epic for the greatest monument in the nation now being carved on the granite sides of the South Dakota Black Hills.

WOMEN'S GROUPS ACTIVE

Here in the Pittsburgh district, where the competition is sponsored by the Sun-Telegraph, which with associated Hearst newspapers are conducting the quest throughout the country, active participation units have been arranged by hundreds of women's groups. There are 114 groups affiliated with the Allegheny County Federation of Women's Clubs which has arranged its own judging committee in co-operation with the Pittsburgh Memorial Committee.

Their entries are being sent direct to the federation's Rushmore chairman, Mrs. E. D. Harshbarger, 239 Gladstone road, Squirrel Hill.

OTHER COMMITTEES

The American Legion auxiliaries are submitting texts through the veterans' special chairman, Jack Watson, 950 Century Building, Pittsburgh. Members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars auxiliary have established their own committee, Mrs. Amelia Kane, 232 Sycamore street, Pittsburgh, is chairman.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy are expressing their pride in America's history through a special committee headed by Mrs. Robert F. Metcalfe, 5412 Howe street. Courts of the Catholic Daughters of America are participating through a joint committee with Miss Catherene Monahan, 904 Phineas street, North Side, as chairman.

RETAILERS GIRD TO FIGHT PA. SALES TAX

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, May 10.—"We are facing a dismal chapter in the fiscal history of the commonwealth."

Thus did State Treasurer Charles A. Waters warn the merchants of Pennsylvania today.

Addressing the Pennsylvania Retailers' Association, Waters pointed out that unless revenues increased by $1,250,000 a month for the remainder of the biennium, the commonwealth's budget will be $21,000,000 in the red by June 1, 1935.

First to suffer under the decision of the State Supreme Court in the Talbot act case will be the state-aided institutions, whose non-preferred appropriations must be slashed to balance the budget, he said.

FIGHT SALES TAX

Waters was invited to give the retailers a picture of the state's financial condition as a basis upon which they would form battle lines to oppose another sales tax which the state treasurer told them would undoubtedly be among the revenue raisers proposed at the next session of the Legislature.

He reiterated his oft-repeated demands for modernization of state and local governments, inferentially rapped the New Deal for its paternalistic tendencies and called for governmental economies. He said:

"What price government is squarely before our taxpayers today and they alone have the answer. We all enjoy the paternalism of local, state and federal governments, and if it does not stop with our health, safety and education, it is perfectly all right with us.

"Surely, the government owes us a living, we are told by the demagogues. Truly, it may be said that government sits at our elbow as we work, as we eat, as we play, as we spend our money or neglect to spend it."

ASSAILS RISING COSTS

Waters declared that the rise in the total cost of government from $200,000,000 for the 1921-1923 biennium to $425,000,000 for the 1931-1933 biennium was out of proportion to the normal growth of the commonwealth during that same period.

Waters said the relief problem was far from solved with 450,000 families on relief at the present time. He placed himself firmly on record against cash payments to the unemployed now being urged by Eric H. Biddle, executive director of the State Emergency Relief Board. Waters, a member of the board, told the retailers:

"I hope we will never import such a scheme into this commonwealth to dull the industry, providence and initiative of our people. Let us profit by our experience and devote our attention to a more constructive solution along the lines of unemployment insurance."

To solve the state's budget problem, Waters said, "nothing short of heroic measures will suffice." He said:

"Personally, I believe that only by the absolute elimination of certain departments, boards and commissioners now functioning in our state government, and a more scientific set of local government, will we find a solution to our difficulties which will meet the approval of the taxpayer."

Revolutionary War Vets to Get Flowers

Members of the Peters Creek Valley Association of the Pennsylvania Society, Shrines of the American Revolution, will decorate graves of 13 Revolutionary soldiers in the Peters Creek Cemetery, Library, and 60 others in Peters Valley, May 20. The services will follow a mass meeting in the Library Baptist Church.

IDEAL: A DARK MAE WEST

Mae West With Dark Hair Voted Ideal By Collegians

CHICAGO, May 10.—(AP.)—Dye Mae West's hair a dark shade and you have what University of Chicago men prefer.

Their ideal woman, some 150 men students, replied in response to a questionnaire, is a plump brunette, "with Mae West curves."

They replied they also liked clinging feminine clothes, bright colored dresses for day, today's length in skirts, small hats, perfume if delicately used, and attractive carriage.

As undesirable, they listed tailored mannish suits, clinging sleek gowns for night, trains on formal gowns, white stockings, galoshes, large hats, eye shadow, bright nail polish, excessive makeup, and gaudy jewelry.

Soviet Engineers Scan Safety Device

A safety device for airplane passengers, invented by John H. Guffey, of 19 Soffel street, yesterday was inspected by two representatives of the Soviet republic. They were Andrew A. Vissman, technical adviser of the Russian Scientific Research Institute of Aviation, and T. Davidoff, director of the Warsaw Airport.

The device is a seat packed with a parachute, which can be dropped from the plane by the pilot.

WOMEN TO AID POPPY SALE

Several hundred women, members of the Allegheny County Council, American Legion Auxiliary, are expected to sell 50,000 memorial poppies during Poppy Day, Saturday.

The poppies were made by disabled veterans in hospitals, including Aspinwall Veterans' Hospital and Pittsburgh Marine Hospital.

Proceeds will be used for direct relief for needy veterans and veterans' families.

Mrs. S. E. Donaldson is chairman of the poppy sale. She points out that wearing a memorial poppy also means paying tribute to the World War dead.

SOVIET SCENE NOT CHEERFUL, WRITER SAYS

Eugene Lyons, American correspondent in Russia for six years, brings back a picture of life in the Soviet Republic that contradicts the statements of American social planners who point to Russia as an example of successful planning and successful regimentation. In the June Cosmopolitan he says:

"I have seen Russia's new factories and power stations, new cities and vastly improved armies . . . On the other hand I saw the hundred and sixty-four million Soviet human beings in their overcrowded homes and foul barracks, millions of them in exile, other millions trudging sullenly in a direction they did not wish to go, all of them holding on desperately to food cards and passports. Then the ghosts of those whose lives had gone to fatten the plump statistics crowded in upon my mind and clamored for a place in the futile accounting."

WAR AGAIN IDEALIZED

Executions, Lyons says, are not referred to as such in Russia. He was once present in the chief prosecutor's office when there was some discussion about three men sentenced to death for speculating in bread.

The prosecutor started to say:

"All three have been sentenced to d—."

Then he changed his words:

"I mean, the highest measure of social defense."

Before returning to America, Lyons crossed Europe from end to end, finding at every frontier barriers of bayonets, tariffs, censorships and spy systems.

He says:

"War is again being idealized—the horrors of the last war are being carefully concealed . . . Psychologically, at least, Europe is prepared for war.

"The danger of conflict between nation and nation is in the forefront of the picture. Behind that, tinging the whole view, is the danger of a war between class and class. It cuts athwart all boundaries."

LEAGUE FAILING

Germany, he points out, has confined her Jews in a psychological ghetto whose walls of hatred and discrimination are more difficult to escape from than the stone barriers of the middle ages. Hitler wiped out the Socialist and Communist parties.

He says:

"Geneva is a spick-and-span file where conferences are stuck away one after another—and forgotten. Unconsciously we talked in whispers, as people do in a cemetery . . . The League of Nations building is an ominously clean, quiet, somnolent place . . . the League making progress in the matters of opium and white slavery, but failing in its larger objectives."

3 Held for Tossing Matches to Monkeys

WICHITA, Kan., May 10.—(AP.)—Three youths were arrested on charges of tossing matches into the monkey cages at the city's zoo. Zoo keepers said the Simians would pounce unsuspectingly on the matches, thinking they were edible and in biting them would burn their mouths.

FEW stores in these United States can lay claim to greater friendliness with the average family than Frank & Seder ... It was the creed of the Founders that no lasting success could be built without mutual confidence, trust and friendship. Throughout the years this simple policy has endured ... as a lasting tribute to Isaac Seder and Jacob H. Frank, who in 1907, gave to Pittsburgh the tiny store that was to become one of its great retail institutions.

IS it surprising then that we have nurtured this ideal ... the heritage of the Founders ... an ideal that reflects itself today in a friendly service, so sincere that it actually lives in the hearts of Pittsburgh people ... a creed that means much to those who value their time and money, and who like to buy where honest value and consistently lower prices go hand in hand with a friendly service that stands for customers' happiness?

NEXT Saturday, the Anniversary of the Founding of this store, affords an opportunity to re-assert those vital principles upon which this business has been built ... and to cement the ties that have bound us so closely to the average family throughout the years ... and since VALUES ARE THE VERY FOUNDATION OF FOUNDERS DAY, we invite you to be present Saturday, May 12th, and give us the privilege of sharing with you the vast assortments of fashionable new merchandise which we will distribute, at prices that will save you a great deal of money

PHONE CONTROL BILL FOUGHT BY BELL

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Establishment of a federal communications commission vested with drastic regulatory powers will disorganize the telephone business Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, charged today before the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

85 PER CENT OWNED

Gifford testified the A. T. & T. and its associated companies, comprising the Bell system, own and operate about 85 per cent of the telephone service of the country He said:

"Regulation is not new to us. From the beginning we have welcomed it. We are now regulated by 45 state commissions, many municipalities and by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Within the past year, we have become further regulated through the NRA and the securities act."

Gifford characterized the Bell System as a business operated on a decentralized basis. He testified:

"The Bell System is one organic whole—research, engineering, manufacturing, supply and operation. In the conduct of the business, responsibility is decentralized.

PROTESTS CONTROL

"The injection of a commission with a veto power between these functions, as this bill does, will disorganize the telephone business, for I am certain that no power on earth can insure effective management and good service if it is necessary that the ordinary transactions of this nation-wide enterprise shall wait upon hearings before a commission in Washington."

Gifford replied to charges contained in a recent report on communications companies submitted to the House committee by Dr. Walter M. W. Splawn, special counsel.

ANSWERS CRITIC

The Splawn report, according to Gifford, characterized the Bell System as a monopoly. Gifford asserted:

"For the year 1932 the report states that the Bell system originated approximately 90 per cent of the local exchange messages. It has long been recognized that the telephone service is a natural monopoly. Today it it a monopoly in every community in the country, with possibly a few exceptions.

"It is the public policy of practically all the states, in many of them declared by statutes and the decisions of their courts, that the telephone is a monopoly, and competition against the public interest. I should remind the committee that Congress has also recognized that the telephone is a proper monopoly."

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Capital Had Advance News That Mellon Case Was Weak

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The real plot to clip the wings of the Blue Eagle is not the one Gen. Johnson has been spouting about, but the one within the most loyal inner New Deal circle.

A number of administration advisers, with entree to the White House, reached the conclusion some time ago that NRA policy should be sheared. Most of the liberals want to cut it down to simple co-operative control of hours and wages, and nothing else.

It would mean an end to Johnson's hastily designed code system restricting competition and boosting prices by agreement.

Whether the White House will go that far is doubtful. But it is clear that the NRA is being permitted quietly to coast along, with the brakes firmly but gently on, until the master dealer in the White House decides what he is going to do about it.

PUBLICITY

The plot which Johnson says he has discovered was the one by business to "make the Blue Eagle walk the plank."

If the under-current in the convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce is an authentic reflection of the best business opinion, those boys would be the last in the world to want the Blue Eagle to do anything like that. What was not said at that convention, as well as by what was said, made it evident that business does not want to give up the NRA code system now. It likes the opportunity of eliminating chiselers and adjusting prices too well for that.

Johnson's discovery, however, was good publicity if nothing else.

BASIS

The real plot has received no publicity yet and none of the plotters want any. They are sincerely convinced that the new deal experiment has proved the futility of going too far in the code system. No chiseler has gone to jail.

Whenever the government gets right up to the question of prosecuting code violators, it shies off and seeks delay. The codes were rushed through so fast that they are a long way from being perfect or even judiciously fair. Johnson's recent effort to reduce hours of work and increase wages has gone nowhere.

These facts are generally admitted on the inside, and the only question is what to do about them. Few suggest the "crack down" method.

Most of the big thinkers lean toward the policy of letting things coast until a more moderate policy can be worked out.

MELLON

It can now be told that the government had reason to believe its income tax case against Andrew Mellon was weak from the start.

Certain investigators from the Internal Revenue Bureau were sent out to Pittsburgh weeks ago to dig into Mellon's income tax situation. Their private report to the treasury indicated the case did not justify prosecution.

The justice department apparently took the position that a grand jury should decide. It did.

GUARENTEES

Mr. Roosevelt's good friend, chairman Fahey, of the Home Loan Board, has been doing some personal footwork recently around the House. He has been working with Representative Prall on a bill which would put mortage companies under a system like the bank deposit guarantee.

It would mean government guarantee of first mortgage bonds, which is a fairly large proposition.

Some other financial departments of the government have found out about the matter and are considerably annoyed. The bill will be blocked or at least modified.

SALVE

Postmaster General Farley harbors no hard feeling because the Republican hold-over he let go from the Post Office found a better job in the Treasury. Mr. Farley sent the man a letter congratulating him on his success and wishing him well.

It only goes to show that Farley likes to see even a Republican get along in the world, although not necessarily in his own department.

NOTES

The crowd of American college professors going to Moscow July 15 to study the red school system have received private assurances that they will not be disturbed by Communist propaganda. It is to be purely a study of educational methods. With such a promise the professors may be able to protect themselves from being converted to Communism. Iowa's Hanford McNider is being talked about for the Republican national chairmanship, but is being opposed by the party strategists because of his American Legion connections. Some of the boys believe it unwise to tie the Republicans up too strongly with the veterans' vote. Huey Long changed his mind swiftly the other day and let the corporation bankruptcy bill pass, after holding it up for three days. As a result some of Huey's personal bills for payment of claims to Louisiana citizens now will be reported soon from Senate committees and given a chance to pass. Huey has not forgotten how to deal with the Democratic leaders.

Wanted Jury Ruling, Now Alibi for Prosecution

UTILITY PROBE HEARS THAYER

ALBANY, N. Y., May 10.—(AP.)—State Senator Warren T. Thayer testified today at the Senate committee investigation of his utility connections that a letter he wrote to a utility executive expressing the hope his legislative activity was "satisfactory to your company" was written for political purposes.

Clayton R. Lusk, Thayer's attorney, asked:

"What difference did it make to you whether the company was satisfied with your work?"

The Senator answered:

"It made a great deal of difference. There were many employes of the Associated Gas and Electric Company in my district and many bond and stock holders, and it would become known to them how the company felt. That would help me in the coming election."

The letter referred to was written by Thayer to S. J. Magee, vice president of the Associated Gas and Electric Company, March 28, 1927.

U. S. JUGGLING 12 BILLION IN WAR DEBTS

By KINGSBURY SMITH

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Future payment of approximately twelve and one-half billion dollars which Europe owes the American taxpayers hung in the balance today as the administration flirted with the idea of finding some new debt settlement plan that would prove satisfactory to both the debtors and Congress.

With President Roosevelt maintaining silence concerning what he has in mind, speculation was rife over the proposals he might make.

These ranged anywhere from a ten billion dollar slash by virtually wiping out past and future interest payments to possible acceptance of tin and other goods in payment of the debts.

FEELS OUT EUROPE

The President smiled at all of them, said nothing, except that his debt message to Congress was a little nearer, that the debtors would be handled on their individual merits, and the government's position remained unchanged concerning its hope of collecting something.

Sources close to the White House continued to maintain the belief the President would "pull something out of the hat" before June 15, when Europe is due to pay another $175,000,000 on account.

However, it was felt in some quarters this would depend upon whether he was able to obtain in advance some assurance from the European debtor nations that they would be willing to resume full payments if he recommended a readjustment.

DEBTORS SEEK STAND

If the President fails to receive such assurances, he may drop the idea of presenting any new plan and merely submit a report to Congress on the status of the debt situation, with a possible recommendation for readjustment of the debt owed by Finland, the only European nation to meet in full its obligations to this country.

Meanwhile, representatives of the debtor nations continued to file into the State Department in search of information concerning what the President has in mind. France and Belgium, both outstanding debt defaulters, were the latest nations to send their envoys to the department.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

I have received touching letters but none that has moved me as this note from Laura B. Wilson, R. N., superintendent of the Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh. It follows in part:

Dear Mr. Kaufman:

The little set of braces were received several days ago. They were most pathetic. Accustomed as I am to these things, I was quite overcome when I unwrapped the package. They meant a little crippled child, a child who would love to run and play like other children, unable to do so.

I hope for his sake, as well as his parents who suffer with and for him, that he is better and does not need these braces any longer. We shall try to adapt them to a child similarly affected.

Will you thank the unknown donor for us, and give him our wish that his child is well.

The child had no more use for the braces. It had passed on to a world where little children do not suffer.

Backstage radio presents many little oddities, whimsies and ironical twists. The more one observes the panorama the more deeply one grieves that O. Henry should have passed on without having had opportunity to make literary fodder of it all.

The little impasses, coincidences and curious situations would have provided him an inexhaustible supply of satire and punch.

He might, for instance, have made much of the story of the miner in Anderson, Nev., who heard a deserted baby crying in one of the Beatrice Fairfax dramas on WCAE-NBC the other night.

The pitiful wailing of the youngster touched the rough toiler's heart.

Without knowing that the sound effect was achieved by having Sallie Belle Cox, mimic, gurgle with her face pressed against a pillow, the old fellow wired in that he would be most happy to adopt the child.

With promptitude equal to his own, the sponsors of the program wired back to the miner and explained that the sounds were made by a 22-year-old girl.

"Okay," flashed back the miner. "I'll still adopt her."

RACIAL GROUPS AID WAR ON LEAGUE

Delegates representing nine racial groups in the Central Council of the Slavic and Allied Civic Leagues of Allegheny County have indorsed the Sun-Telegraph petition protesting to Congress against any move which might force this nation into the League of Nations and World Court. The delegates represent approximately 100,000 residents of the county.

More than 80 delegates to the meeting signed the Sun-Telegraph petition, after a resolution endorsing it was presented by Attorney Gregory Zatkovich, president of the council. The resoluition also thanked the Sun-Telegraph for co-operatoin given to the various racial groups making up the council.

In addition to Zatkovich, other officers who signed the petition were John P. Ladesic, vice president and Lawrence Delost, assistant secretary.

Several hundred additional signatures have been received by the Sun-Telegraph from residents of the Pittsburgh district in the last day or two. All signatures are to be shipped to Washington immediately to be presented to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee at a hearing Wednesday.

There is still time to have petitions signed. Each day the Sun-Telegraph publishes a blank petition which you and your neighbors can sign and return to the Sun-Telegraph. All signatures will be sent to Washington in time for the hearing next week.

PETITION AGAINST PARTICIPATION In the LEAGUE of NATIONS and World Court

If you want to save America from European entanglements and keep your country out of foreign wars, and foreign wars out of your country, sign this petition:

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE UNITED STATES SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

We protest AGAINST the United States participating in the League of Nations or in the World Court of the League of Nations, with or without "reservations."

We petition our Federal Government to keep our United States "free from foreign entanglements," as the Father of Our Country wisely enjoined.

We urge our Congress at Washington to keep our government from meddling in foreign affairs, and to keep foreign nations from meddling in our American affairs.

As loyal American citizens, we ask our loyal representatives to keep our country out of foreign conflicts and complications and to keep foreign conflicts and complications out of our country.

NAME ADDRESS

Additional names may be added to this petition by pasting a sheet of paper hereto. PRESENTED through the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

PEACE DEMAND MODIFIED

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP.)—The onehundredth-fiftyfirst convention of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New York in its final session last night accepted the less vigerous of two resolutions on world peace.

The resolution adopted had been offered as a substitute for one which declared that "hereafter the Christian church ought not to sanction or support war" and that:

"The church asserts and will seek to defend the right of any of its individual members who by conscientious conviction refuse to have any part in any war."

A committee's majority report, which held that a recent declaration on world peace made by the house of bishops was "adequate and made further pronouncement unnecessary," was finally the resolution accepted, 138 to 90.

The bishop's pronouncement called upon members of the church "to wage unremitting war against war" and asserted:

"In any issue between country and God, the clear duty of the christian is to put obedience to God above every other loyalty."

JAPS OUT TO WIN TRADE WAR

TOKIO, May 10.—(AP.)—Japan scanned the commercial horizon today, seeking new markets with which to fight British restrictions on Japanese exports.

As a counter thrust, Japanese industrial leaders propose to sell in Latin America, Manchuria, South China, Egypt and even in the British dominions the products which quota restrictions will exclude from the British Isles.

The view that Japanese enterprise will triumph is held by Fusajiro Abe, president of the Japan Spinners' Association, whose organization will be pitted against the mills of Lancashire.

Japan's billion-yen cotton textile industry, which employs 1,200,000 persons, prepared for the test without anticipating a reduction in production.

Damages Awarded In Postoffice Job

Clair H. Quinette, a hauling contractor, was awarded a verdict of $5,732.64 by a Federal Court jury against the Booth & Flinn Company and the United States Guarantee Company, the action growing out of excavation work done in March, 1931, at the site of the new postoffice and federal building.

Booth & Flinn had the contract. Quinette claimed that a contractor to whom the defendant concern subleted some of the work, failed to make final settlement and brought suit to recover $7,475.

HITLER ENVOY IN LONDON

LONDON, May 10.—(AP.)—Gen. Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Chancellor Adolf Hitler's personal investigator and negotiator on arms questions came to London today to learn British views on disarmament.

He arranged for interviews with Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon and Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal.

It was authoritatively stated that Ribbentrop's sudden visit was caused by German fears of sharp action by the League of Nations against German re-armament.

It was understood Ribbentrop seeks to obtain a British promise that England will not support League action against Germany.

YOUNG MOTHER LOYAL TO BABY, 'NIETZSCHE'

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, May 10.—Mercedes Ford, slim, pretty, 17, and unmarried, was allowed to take both her year-old baby and her book of Nietzsche to the Florence Crittenden Home last night after the city postponed her trial on shoplifting charges.

During the long wait at court Mercedes clutched the baby in one arm and the German philosopher's writings in the other as she poured out the story of her brief but dramatic life. Said she:

"I would have been graduating from high school about now, only I met a guy that I was crazy about. And I knew I was going to have a baby, so I left home."

Home was Roxbury Mass., Mercedes went on:

"I haven't heard from the guy since, but I wanted to have my baby alone. Then I tried to find a job, but there wasn't much hope of that.

"After a while I met another guy, and he gave me plenty of money. So I thought I'd try to get some easy money too, and I got caught.

"A girl is a dope to get crazy about any guy."

A matron came to take the baby away. Mercedes said:

"If you do she will die. I still have to nurse her, you see."

A prison physician checked up and found it was true. The baby needed her mother's care. He also said Mercedes needed medical treatment and rest.

So the city postponed action and Mercedes was ordered transferred to the home, together with her baby and her Nietzsche. She remarked:

"That guy Nietzsche, he knew his stuff."

Escapes Car Crash, Dies by Hanging

TOWANDA, May 10.—(AP.)—A short time after he had escaped unhurt in a serious automobile accident yesterday, Irving Brown, 62, of West Burlington, was found hanging by a rope from a rafter of his barn. Coroner R. H. Person said it was a case of suicide.

GENTLEMEN OF THE JURY AT PLAY ON A DAY OFF FROM THE MILLEN BOYS' MURDER TRIAL

Jurors in the trial of the Millen brothers and Abe Faber at Dedham, Mass., during an afternoon off from the confinement of the courtroom. The three young men are on trial for a bank robbery fatal to two guards. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

NORMA LINKED IN SLAYING

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

DEDHAM, Mass., May 10.—Norma Brighton Millen, violet-eyed 19-year-old minister's daughter, who played with fire, was right-in-the-middle today.

Etched on the court record of her young husband's murder trial was the story of how she sat in with him and his brother—Murton and Irving Millen—and Abe Faber as they plotted the holdup of the Needham Trust Company.

Two policemen were killed by machine gun bullets during the robbery.

The confession of Faber, so bitterly fought for a week by defense counsel, brought forth this testimony that the young high school beauty had full knowledge of the crime.

The linking of Norma with the Needham robbery and murder—and its possible consequences to her—suggested the reason why defense counsel used every legal strategy to forestall admission into evidence of the Faber confession.

The way tobacco is cut has a lot to do with the way Chesterfield burns and tastes

There are many different ways of cutting tobacco.

A long time ago, it used to be cut on what was known as a Pease Cutter, but this darkened the tobacco, and it was not uniform.

The cutters today are the most improved, modern, up-to-the-minute type. They cut uniformly, and cut in long shreds.

The tobacco in Chesterfield is cut right—you can judge for yourself how Chesterfields burn and how they taste.

Everything that science knows is used to make Chesterfield the cigarette that's milder . . . the cigarette that tastes better.

PENROD OF '400' QUITS PARK AVE. FOR FILMS

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP)—James Blakely, 23-year-old former suitor of Barbara Hutton, is leaping today from Park Avenue to Hollywood with a movie contract in his pocket.

He says he is bored with society and disapproves of it besides. He declared:

"New York society is futile and probably very boring to most of the people in it. It is terrible for young people because it gives them bigoted ideas of themselves. It is much better to be on your own."

Blakely, who is the son of the socially prominent Mrs. Grace Hyde, is a tall youth who might be Penrod grown up a bit.

Nor has he any illusions about becoming a heavy hero. He said:

"I'd like to do light comedy, the Robert Montgomery type. I might be a total failure if I had to emote."

He almost hopes he won't get too celebrated because he hates crowds.

He said he doubted that he would find romance in Hollywood. Then it came out that this member of the young generation is "very mid-Victorian" and believes in women being "home bodies" instead of actresses.

Blakely said he does not drink or smoke, indulge in coffee or tea, or even meat more than three times a week. Part of this is principle, he said, part his experiences at "deb" parties. He said:

"There's no excuse for such drinking as they do at deb parties, where people pass out and have to be carried away."

NURSES' CLASS GRADUATING

Eight nurses of the Ohio Valley Hospital, McKees Rocks, will graduate today at services to be held in the Miles Bryan High School, McKees Rocks, and tomorrow night they will be honored with a graduation dance at the Mayfair Hotel.

Miss Helen Dunczyk is chairman of the dance committee, and will be assisted by Miss Minnette Wolfkill and Miss Teresa Martin. The affair is sponsored by the Nurses' Alumnae of the Ohio Valley Hospital.

The graduating nurses are Sister Mary Blanche, Ethel Hogan, Hilda Eschendro, Helen McLaughlin, Estelle Daszy, Hilda Schelien, Frances LaFlane and Mary Wozniczak.

Junior Patrol

Be as skillful as you can, fellows!

To be strong is good, but to be skillful is better. Best of all, a fellow should be both strong and skillful. But there are a great many things that men do which require more skill than strength.

Typewriting is a pretty good example. Probably most Junior Patrol members have seen somebody typewriting. Maybe you have a typewriter of your own right at home, on which you could practice.

Everybody knows nowadays that it is a good thing to know how to type. It is quicker, easier and more legible than the best handwriting, although good handwriting will always be valuable and worthwhile.

But typewriting takes skill. No matter how strong you are—even if you had hands and muscles so strong that you could tear telephone books in two—it wouldn't help you much in becoming a good typist. Of course, typing takes endurance and strength, too, and if you type a long time you will get tired and your fingers and arms will hurt. But the good typist works so smoothly and effortlessly that anyone can see that skill is the most important thing. Scarcely a motion is wasted.

It is the same in athletics. Some of the greatest football players were small fellows. But they were so quick on their feet, and knew so well how to make what strength they had count that they could shove around much bigger men. Many great baseball players have been small men. Some of the greatest tennis players have been lightweight fellows, not big strong fellows at all.

So if you aren't as big as some of your friends don't be downhearted or discouraged. Work all the harder and use your head more. You can become more skillful. And the skillful fellow usually wins.

PASTE E FAGIOLO
(Macaroni and Beans.)

Time—One hour, not including time for beans.

Cook one cup dry navy or lima beans until tender with one teaspoon salt and one teaspoon sugar, pinch of soda, using plenty of water. Just before putting kettle on to boil for macaroni, the sauce can be started: One tablespoon lard, one tablespoon butter, one small can tomatoes, one small onion, salt and pepper to taste. Slice onion thin and brown in lard, using a skillet. Then add tomatoes and butter, also salt and pepper. Boil down until thick. Then a cup of hot water may be added. Repeat, having sauce thick when ready to use. Cook one pound short or long macaroni, broken in short lengths, in plenty of boiling salt water until tender. Drain macaroni liquid to just below level of macaroni. Add beans with one cup of the water in which they were cooked. Then add sauce. Stir well, season and allow to boil together for about five or seven minutes.. Serve.

MRS. ALBERT PRICE,
518 Baltimore street, Belle Vernon.
PARADISE BREAD.

One cup hot milk.
One-third cup butter or other fat.
One-fourth cup sugar.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One egg.
Three-fourth yeast cake dissolved in
One-fourth cup lukewarm milk.
Two and three-fourth cups flour.

Add butter, sugar and salt to hot milk. When mixture is lukewarm add dissolved yeast cake, egg, well beaten, flour to make a stiff batter; cover and let rise. Spread in buttered dripping pan one-half inch thick, cover and let rise again.

Before baking melt two tablespoons butter and spread over coffee cake. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Cover a well greased oblong tin as thin as possible with raised dough. Core, pare and cut four or five apples in eighths. Lay them in parallel rows on top of the dough and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Beat the yolk of an egg, add three tablespoonfuls cream, and drip around apples. Bake 20 to 30 minutes in hot oven, or until crust is well baked and apples are soft. Peaches or plums may be used in place of the apples. Pare the peaches, cut in halves and remove the stone. If plums are used, wipe carefully, cut in halves and remove the stones.

AUTO, TROLLEY CRASH, 3 FLEE

Picking themselves out of the wreckage of their demolished auto, two young men and a girl calmly walked away from the scene of an accident during the morning rush hour today, police reported.

The auto, driven by one of the youths, was city-bound on Forbes street. At Wightman street, the driver attempted to pass a street-car traveling in the same direction and, swerving to the left, crashed into an outbound car, witnesses said.

Police are seeking the three.

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

If you wish to invest a minimum of time and get for it a maximum of smartness—this is your model. It's simply amazing that so much chic should result from so little effort. Before you seem to have fairly begun it, the frock is finished and you have a really good looking gown whether you combine two fabrics, as in the sketch, or make it all of one material. Much of its effectiveness lies in the lines of the yoke and the way it makes little caps over the shoulders and buttons in the front—but just generally speaking it's a nice frock.

Pattern 1838 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 takes 2¾ yards 36-inch fabric and ⅝ yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

TEACHERS' OATH BILL URGED ON LEHMAN

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, May 10.—In a prompt report to Gov. Lehman, the state education department gave full approval to the Ives bill, which would require all public school teachers to swear allegiance to the state and federal constitutions.

The report came as officials of the Veterans of Foreign Wars denounced the action of 700 teachers, who signed a petition asking the Governor to veto the measure. The United Real Estate Owners' Association also asked Lehman to sign the bill.

With the measure on his desk since its passage by the Legislature, Lehman asked the education department for an opinion.

The Governor further indicated his keen interest in the bill by asking whether it would affect alien teachers' allegiance to their native lands. Cole was unable to answer that without further study. Lehman was concerned about exchange professorships and political exiles from Hitler Germany and other countries.

The 700 teachers, who signed a petition sent to the Governor by the Teachers Anti-War Committee, were indicted by G. W. Duggan, head of the department of patriotic instruction of the veterans organization. He said:

"Any teacher in our schools or one about to enter our schools who objects to such an oath should be refused admission or forced to resign. Our schools are meant to be manned only by teachers who believe in our Constitution."

California Teachers Pledge Loyalty

LOS ANGELES, May 10.—(Universal.)—California public school children are safeguarded against disloyal school teachers by rigid state law requirements, both as to the taking of an oath of allegiance to the Constitution of the United States and as to dismissal of any teacher against whom disloyalty has been proved.

This was made clear today by Board of Education and school officials, who expressed amazement at the New York situation in which 700 teachers protested against taking such an oath. It was declared that no teacher in Southern California has ever objected to fulfilling the requirement.

The California school law provides that teaching credentials shall be granted only after the applicant has taken the following oath or affirmation:

"I solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support the Constitution of the United States, the Constitution of the State of California and will, by precept and example, promote respect for the flag and the statutes of the United States and of the State of California, reverence for law and order, and undivided allegiance to the United States of America."

Undernourishment in Children Too Common

I recently visited a large city hospital. On my tour of inspection I was taken to the children's ward and was amazed to see the number of children being treated for undernourishment. It is indeed a pathetic sight to see such youngsters, emaciated and undeveloped. At the time of life they should be sturdy and happy, they are weak and miserable.

Dr. Copeland

No doubt you will be surprised to learn that undernourishment in children is not always due to lack of funds to purchase necessary food. In most instances, probably, it can be traced to a lack of proper food, rather than a lack in the amount of food. Many children of rich parents are victims of this disorder.

Children who are permitted to choose their food according to taste and whim, rather than their need, soon suffer from the effects of undernourishment. The child who is fed on a diet deficient in certain vitamins, minerals, proteins, carbohydrates and fats, is unable to make the normal strides in growth and development.

Of course there are cases where the child suffers from want of certain foods because of lack of appetite. He may be the victim of dislikes or faulty habits acquired in very early life.

Encourage the child to eat. But never force him to eat. If appetite is poor, perhaps it is due to a lack of variety in the dishes. It may be advisable to give cod liver oil.

A child often develops a dislike for certain important foods because the parent dislikes this food and says so. If you dislike spinach, do not voice your opinion in front of the child. Children are easily influenced and imitate their elders.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

LAWRENCE SHAW, National Director — J. JAMES MOORE, Pittsburgh Wing Commander

Contact! For Sun-Telegraph's Wing Field Day at County Airport June 9!

By J. JAMES MOORE, Pittsburgh Wing Commander.

Hello, junior pilots! Here is some dandy news that I know you have been waiting to hear. Our first Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph wing field day will be held on Saturday afternoon, June 9, at the City-County Airport.

Many of you birdmen and birdwomen have never yet seen the countys' $4,000,000 flying field, which has more hard-surfaced runways than any other airport in the world. There are dozens of interesting things to look at in the administration building and on the field. Besides we are going to have one of the finest air shows ever held in the Pittsburgh district.

Mr. Hal R. Bazley, the airport manager and a top-notch flyer, said in part in his letter granting the Junior Birdmen permission for the Field Day:

"In view of the fact that this is a civic program and that it will not be commercialized and is for the purpose of increasing the interest of your members in aviation, we will be very glad to have you hold this Field Day at our airport."

Also I would like to tell you about Mr. Bazley's fine radio talk several days ago on the Globe-trotting program with Mr. Louis Kaufman. Here is one statement from his talk that I know you would be interested in:

"It is surprising how many of the younger generation are awake to the commercial possibilities of aviation and are interested in trying to make a place for themselves in this new industry.

"It is true that to a certain extent they are interested in flying itself, undoubtedly being fascinated by the thrill of flying rather than its business aspect. The possibilities however are in no way limited to the pilot alone, as in the organization of a large aviation company, there is a demand for trained men in many capacities which in no way require flying ability, although naturally such an experience is a decided asset.

"For example, in design, engineering and construction of an airplane, an airway or an airport, skilled technicians or engineers are required with ability not commonly held by a pilot alone which offers a tremendous field to men who are inclined toward aviation but have not actually had flying experience.

"The same holds true in the executive management of an airline or an airport as in this case there is required executives with high type of business ability, an official purchasing department, as well as trained traffic department and real sales organization.

"In the organization of a major airline there are probably at least 10 men on the ground for every pilot in the air which clearly indicates that the future possibilities are not restricted to those who are able to fly."

In closing his talk Mr. Bazley stated:

"There is therefore no question but what this organization will have the highest endorsement of all those who are interested in the aviation industry and that it will satisfy a need on the part of those who realize that a firm foundation is required for future success."

Remember therefore, when you read the first lesson tomorrow in the model builders' course that you are not just learning about the flying of an airplane. Though it is a step in that direction, you must not forget that someday you may be one of the country's great-est designers of new airplanes or a great aviation engineer. As Mr. Bazley says, there are many positions in the aviation business besides flying an airplane.

Our Daily Mail

Virginia Darke, 14 Elm street, Washington, Pa., and Helen Powell, New Brighton, Pa.—The third aviation dictionary which you missed due to the Mailers' strike was published again last Friday. I regret that it is impossible to send you back-copies of the air dictionary. Perhaps at the end of the series I will repeat the first three or four lists.

The other day I asked you members to send me your ideas on our air dictionary. It is interesting to note that so many girls, such as Virginia and Helen are clipping these definitions out and saving them for reference.

You boys will have some keen competition for our girl members who are working just as hard as you are—and they are liable to display much more talent in our model plane work than you expected when the time comes.

George Thomas, Rankin—According to national headquarter rules, you must have no less than 10 members to have a flight squadron. It may include any member of the Junior Birdmen, regardless of whether he or she is a group A or group B member.

John Sherpensky, Jr., 1107 Juniata street—I regret that I can not send you the 30 membership coupons. You will have to clip them from the Sun-Telegraph. Perhaps your neighbors who read the paper will help you.

Buddy Leiber—The Department of Commerce is checking on who owns the plane with license number N R-105-W. I do know, however, that N means international, while R means restricted. It may be restricted perhaps to racing, or survey work or something such.

Robert F. Carson, Irwin, Pa.—The fusillages of most airplanes are made of steel tubing.

An airplane engine has a higher compression and a lower speed than the automobile engine. The plane motor also has a lower weight horsepower ratio.

Bud Grier, New Kensington, Pa.—The age groups are as follows: class B, 10 to 15, inclusive; class A, 16 to 21, inclusive. A member may transfer from group B to group A membership upon reaching his sixteenth birthday.

Our space is up for today. Don't forget we start our model plane building course tomorrow. HAPPY LANDINGS!

POLITICS

Old Time Politicians Are Losing Their Grip

By MARK SHIELDS

Each day of this primary campaign re-emphasizes that the old-line and old-time political leaders, in both Republican and Democratic parties, have lost their grip, even to a point where they refrain from estimates as to the outcome of the state-wide campaign.

Mark Shields

So far as most of the legislative and congressional fights are concerned they throw up their hands helplessly, first because of the number of candidates in many districts, and secondly because control no longer exists as it once did, even in primary elections.

No sense can be made of a situation in the minds of political leaders where there are legislative districts in which regular organization Republicans, while not shedding their old skins, admit frankly that their chief interest is in the Democratic nomination, in which primary they also run. This sentiment is confined to no one district.

It is a direct refutation of the cry of politicians for party regularity, for loyalty, and for devotion to the "fine old principles" of the Republican or Democratic parties, the choice dependent upon which the speaker favors. Apparently it is all right for the public to pay some attention to party lines but the candidates need not.

There is almost pathos in the manner of old-line Republican leaders here as they discuss their activities. The slightest response from the electorate in attendance at a meeting is greeted with groveling cheerfulness, and where once orders were issued, now pleadings emanate.

This situation is not peculiar to Pittsburgh and Allegheny County. One veteran Republican leader of Western Pennsylvania said yesterday:

"I will watch the election results Tuesday night with more interest than I ever did before. And I also will watch them with less relative assurance as to the result than I ever have before. We just don't know any more what the people are figuring to do, and they aren't telling us."

* * *

Surface Interest Seems Lacking

Meetings on behalf of statewide candidates have not been well attended. This is a strange contradiction to the politicians, who can't understand the rift between the heavy registration and enrollment and the lack of surface interest.

At one meeting on behalf of legislative districts a couple of nights ago, in a district which shall be nameless, there were 31 candidates present and 15 mere voters in the audience.

It may be, and this assumption is held reasonable by most political leaders, that the people are not only bewildered but out of patience because of the number of candidates for all offices. For that reason they are staying home, making up their minds without much outside influence, and on election day will go and vote as they please. This is a tough break for a political organization.

Attorney General William A. Schnader yesterday denied that New York whisky interests were contributing to his campaign. The Attorney General's denial grew out of a statement by one of his rivals for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, Lieut. Gov. Edward C. Shannon, which did not reveal the latter in his best light. General Shannon said in a speech that one of his opponents was getting money from the source named.

He was asked to be specific, but said:

"You can draw your own conclusions."

And then he added that he did not intend to break his pledge to avoid personalities.

* * *

Should Support Story By Evidence

The story about Mr. Schnader has been whispered for some time because of the manner in which he, while the Legislature was in session, negotiated with distillers an agreement which permitted the state to get revenue from the floor tax eventually while the distillers could move their liquor. One result of the negotiation was to avert a long court fight on the new liquor legislation.

If General Shannon believed the story about campaign contributions, of course he should have had some supporting evidence for an initial blast, which was not offered, and he should have been specific in mentioning names.

Without clarification by newspapermen, the story to the uninitiated stood as a shaft at any rival candidate, and concealment of the name was not an abstinence from personalities.

This is no brief for Mr. Schnader, but in the episode the Lieutenant Governor, reverenced by his war comrades as "Two-yard Shannon" because of his dogged courage, appeared to limit his attack to about a yard and a half. And why the shyness at personalities, by any of the candidates. None is backward about talking critically about his rivals in private. In the light of their platforms and expressions of devotion to the public service it is personality after all which is about the main difference in the candidates. If they know something about each other which would be helpful to the public in making a decision, it should be said.

THE THIN MAN

Detective Meets Old Friend in Speakeasy

By Dashiell Hammett

Secretary of Detective's Former Client Slain, He Meets Daughter

By DASHIELL HAMMETT

(Soon to appear on the screen at Loew's Penn Theater as a thrilling motion picture made by Cosmopolitan Productions for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.)

I was leaning against the bar in a speakeasy on Fifty-second street, waiting for Nora to finish her Christmas shopping, when a girl got up from the table where she had been sitting with three other people and came over to me. She was small and blonde, and whether you looked at her face or at her body in powder-blue sports clothes the result was satisfactory. "Aren't you Nick Charles?" she asked.

I said: "Yes."

She held out her hand. "I'm Dorothy Wynant. You don't remember me, but you ought to remember my father, Clyde Wynant. You—"

"Sure," I said, "and I remember you now, but you were only a kid of 11 or 12 then, weren't you?"

"Yes, that was eight years ago. Listen: remember those stories you told me? Were they true?"

"Probably not. How is your father?"

She laughed. "I was going to ask you. Mamma divorced him, you know, and we never hear from him—except when he gets in the newspapers now and then with some of his carryings on. Don't you ever see him?"

My glass was empty. I asked her what she would have to drink, she said Scotch and soda, I ordered two of them and said: "No, I've been living in San Francisco."

She said slowly "I'd like to see him. Mamma would raise hell if she found it out, but I'd like to see him."

"Well?"

"He's not where we used to live, on Riverside Drive, and he's not in the phone book or city directory."

"Try his lawyer," I suggested.

Her face brightened. "Who is he?"

"It used to be a fellow named Mac-something-or-other—Macaulay, that's it, Herbert Macaulay. He was in the Singer Building."

"Lend me a nickel," she said, and went out to the telephone. She came back smiling. "I found him. He's just round the corner on Fifth avenue."

Father Out of Town

"Your father?"

"The lawyer. He says my father's out of town. I'm going round to see him." She raised her glass to me. "Family reunion. Look, why don't—"

Asta jumped up and punched me in the stomach with her front feet. Nora, at the other end of the leash, said: "She'd had a swell afternoon—knocked over a table of toys at a department store, scared a fat woman silly by licking her leg in Saks', and's been patted by three policemen."

I made introductions. "My wife, Dorothy Wynant. Her father was once a client of mine, when she was only so high. A good guy, but screwy."

"I was fascinated by him," Dorothy said, meaning me, "a real live detetctive, and used to follow him around making him tell me about his experiences. He told me awful lies, but I believed every word."

I said: "You look tired, Nora."

"I am. Let's sit down."

Dorothy Wynant said she had to go back to her table. She shook hands with Nora; we must drop in for cocktails, they were living at the Courtland, her mother's name was Jorgensen now. We would be glad to and she must come see us some time, we were at the Normandie and would be in New York for another week or two. Dorothy patted the dog's head and left us.

We found a table. Nora said: "She's pretty."

"If you like them like that."

She grinned at me. "You got types?"

"Only you, darling—lanky brunettes with wicked jaws."

"And how about the red-head you wandered off with at the Quinns' last night?"

"That's silly," I said. "She just wanted to show me some French etchings."

Lawyer Calls Up

The next day Herbert Macauley telephoned me. "Hello. I didn't know you were back in town till Dorothy Wynant told me. How about lunch?"

"What time is it?"

"Half past eleven. Did I wake you up?"

"Yes," I said, "but that's all right. Suppose you come up here for lunch: I've got a hangover and don't feel like running around much . . . O. K., say one o'clock."

I had a drink with Nora, who was going out to have her hair washed, then another after a shower, and was feeing better by the time the telephone rang again.

A female voice asked: "Is Mr. Macauley there?"

"Not yet."

"Sorry to trouble you, but would you mind asking him to call his office as soon as he gets there? It's important."

I promised to do that.

Macauley arrived about 10 minutes later. He was a big curly-haired, rosky - cheeked, rather good-looking chap of about my age—41—though he looked younger. He was supposed to be a pretty good lawyer. I had worked on several jobs for him when I was living in New York and we had always got along nicely.

Now we shook hands and patted each other's backs, and he asked me how the world was treating me, and I said, "Fine," and asked him and he said, "Fine," and I told him to call his office.

He came away from the telephone frowning. "Wynant's back in town," he said, "and wants me to meet him."

I turned around with the drinks I had poured. "Well, the lunch can—"

"Let him wait," he said, and took one of the glasses from me.

"Still as screwey as ever?"

Was in Sanitorium

"That's no joke," Macaulay said solemnly. "You heard they had him in a sanatorium for nearly a year back in '29?"

"No."

He nodded. He sat down, put his glass on a table beside his chair, and leaned towards me a little. "What's Mimi up to, Charles?"

"Mimi? Oh, the wife—the ex-wife. I don't know. Does she have to be up to something?"

"She usually is," he said dryly, and then very slowly, "and I thought you'd know."

So that was it. I said: "Listen, Mac, I haven't been a detective for six years, since 1927."

He stared at me.

"On the level," I assured him, "a year after I got married, my wife's father died and left her a lumber mill and a narrow-gauge railroad and some other things and I quit the Agency to look after them. Anyway I wouldn't be working for Mimi Wynant, or Jorgensen, or whatever her name is—she never liked me and I never liked her."

Attorney Puzzled

"Oh, I didn't think you"—Macauley broke off with a vague gesture and picked up his glass. When he took it away from his mouth, he said: "I was just wondering. Here Mimi phones me three days ago—Tuesday—trying to find Wynant; then yesterday Dorothy phones, saying you told her to, and comes around, and—I thought you were still sleuthing. So I was wondering what it was all about."

"Didn't they tell you?"

"Sure—they wanted to see him for old times' sake. That means a lot."

"You lawyers are a suspicious crew," I said. "Maybe they did—that and money. But what's the fuss about? Is he in hiding?"

Macaulay shrugged. "You know as much about it as I do. I haven't seen him since October." He drank again. "How long are you going to be in town?"

"Till after New Years," I told him and went to the telephone to ask room service for menus.

Secretary Murdered

Nora and I went to the opening of Honeymoon at the Little Theater that night and then to a party given by some people named Freeman or Fielding or something. I felt pretty low when she called me the next morning. She gave me a newspaper and a cup of coffee and said: "Read that."

I patiently read a paragraph or two, then put the paper down and took a sip of coffee. "Fun's fun," I said, "but right now I'd swap you all the interviews with Mayor-elect O'Brien ever printed—and throw in the Indian picture—for a slug of whis—"

"Not that, stupid." She put a finger on the paper. "That."

INVENTOR'S SECRETARY MURDERED IN APARTMENT

Julia Wolf's Bullet - Riddled Body Found; Police Seek Her Employer, Clyde Wynant.

The bullet-riddled body of Julia Wolf, 32-year-old confidential secretary to Clyde Miller Wynant, well-known inventor, was discovered late yesterday afternoon in the dead woman's apartment, at 411 East Fifty-fourth street, by Mrs. Christian Jorgensen, divorced wife of the inventor, who had gone there in an attempt to learn her former husband's present address.

Mrs. Jorgensen, who returned Monday after a six-year stay in Europe, told police that she heard feeble groans when she rang the murdered woman's door-bell, whereupon she notified an elevator boy, Mervin Holly, who called Walter Meany, apartment-house superintendent. Miss Wolf was lying on the bedroom floor with four .32-caliber bullet wounds in her chest when they entered the apartment, and died without having recovered consciousness before police and medical aid arrived.

Herbert Macaulay, Wynant's attorney, told the police that he had not seen the inventor since October. He stated that Wynant called him on the telephone yesterday and made an appointment, but failed to keep it; and disclaimed any knowledge of his client's whereabouts. Miss Wolf, Macaulay stated, had been in the inventor's employ for the past eight years. The attorney said he knew nothing about the dead woman's family or private affairs and could throw no light on her murder.

The bullet wounds could not have been self-inflicted, according to . . .

Wynant 'Batty'

The rest of it was the usual police department hand-out.

"Do you suppose he killed her?" Nora asked when I put the paper down again.

"Wynant? I wouldn't be surprised. He's batty."

"Did you know her?"

"Yes. How about a drop of something to cut the rust?"

"What was she like?"

"Not bad," I said. "She wasn't bad-looking and she had a lot of sense and a lot of nerve—and it took both to live with that guy."

"She lived with him?"

"Yes. I want a drink, please. That is, it was like that when I knew them."

"Why don't you have some breakfast first? Was she in love with him or was it just business?"

"I don't know. It's too early for breakfast."

When Nora opened the door to go out, the dog came in and put her front feet on the bed, her face in my face. I rubbed her head and tried to remember something Wynant had once said to me, something about women and dogs. I could not remember what it was, but there seemed to be some point in trying to remember.

Nora returned with two drinks and another question: "What's he like?"

"Tall—over six feet—and one of the thinnest men I've ever seen. He must be about 50 now, and his hair was almost white when I knew him. Usually needs a haircut, ragged brindle mustache, bites his fingernails." I pushed the dog away to reach for my drink.

"Sounds lovely. What were you doing with him?"

Accused of Theft

"A fellow who'd worked for him accused him of stealing some kind of idea or invention from him. Rosewater was his name. He tried to shake Wynant down by threatening to shoot him, bomb his house, kidnap his children, cut his wife's throat—I don't know what all—if he didn't come across. We never caught him—must've scared him off. Anyway, the threats stopped and nothing happened."

Nora stopped drinking to ask: "Did Wynant really steal it?"

"Tch, tch, tch," I said. "This is Christmas Eve: try to think good of your fellow man."

That afternoon I took Asta for a walk, explained to two people that she was a Schnauzer and not a cross between a Scottie and an Irish terrier, stopped at Jim's for a couple of drinks, ran into Larry Crowley, and brought him back to the Normandie with me. Nora was pouring cocktails for the Quinns, Margot Innes, a man whose name I did not catch, and Dorothy Wynant.

Dorothy said she wanted to talk to me, so we carried our cocktails into the bedroom.

She came to the point right away. "Do you think my father killed her, Nick?"

"No," I said. "Why should I?"

"Well, the police have—Listen, she was his mistress, wasn't she?"

I nodded. "When I knew them."

She stared at her glass while saying, "He's my father. I never liked him. I never liked Mamma." She looked up at me. "I don't like Gilbert." Gilbert was her brother.

"Don't let that worry you. Lots of people don't like their relatives."

"Do you like them?"

"My relatives?"

"Mine." She scowled at me. "And stop talking to me as if I was still 12."

Just Spoiled Kid

"It's not that," I explained. "I'm getting tight."

"Well, do you?"

I shook my head. "You were all right, just a spoiled kid. I could get along without the rest of them."

"What's the matter with us?" she asked, not argumentatively, but as if she really wanted to know.

"Different things. Your—"

Harrison Quinn opened the door and said: "Come on over and play some ping-pong, Nick."

"In a little while."

"Bring beautiful along." He leered at Dorothy and went away.

She said: "I don't suppose you know Jorgensen."

"I know a Nels Jorgensen."

"Some people have all the luck. This one's named Christian. He's a honey. That's Mamma—divorces a lunatic and marries a gigolo." Her eyes became wet. She caught her breath in a sob and asked: "What am I going to do, Nick?" Her voice was a frightened child's.

I put an arm around her and made what I hoped were comforting sounds. She cried on my lapel. The telephone beside the bed began to ring. In the next room the radio was blaring. My glass was empty. I said: "Walk out on them."

She sobbed again. "You can't walk out on yourself."

"Maybe I don't know what you're talking about."

"Please don't tease me," she said humbly.

Mystery Call

Nora, coming in to answer the telephone, looked questioningly at me. I made a face at her over the girl's head.

When Nora said "Hello" into the telephone, the girl stepped quickly back away from me and blushed. "I—I'm sorry," she stammered, "I didn't—"

Nora smiled sympathetically at her. I said: "Don't be a dope." The girl found her handkerchief and dabbed at her eyes with it.

Nora spoke into the telephone: "Yes . . . I'll see if he's in. Who's calling, please?" She put a hand over the mouthpiece and addressed me: "It's a man named Norman. Do you want to talk to him?"

I said I didn't know and took the telephone. "Hello."

A somewhat harsh voice said: "Mr. Charles? . . . Mr. Charles, I understand that you were formerly connected with the Trans-American Detective Agency."

"Who is that?" I asked.

"My name is Albert Norman, Mr. Charles, which probably means nothing to you, but I would like to lay a proposition before you. I am sure you will—"

"What kind of a proposition?"

"I can't discuss it over the phone, Mr. Charles, but if you will give me half an hour of your time, I can promise—"

"Sorry," I said. "I'm pretty busy and—"

"But, Mr. Charles, this is—" Then there was a loud noise: it could have been a shot or something falling or anything else that would make a loud noise. I said, "Hello," a couple of times, got no answer and hung up.

MAYOR SCORES ATTEMPTS TO HUSH CASE

Magistrate Releases Suspect After Reprimand

On orders of Mayor McNair a city fireman accused of being drunk at a fire was arraigned before Magistrate J. W. McGowan in Central Police Station today.

The Mayor scored attempts to keep the case secret.

The accused fireman was Hoseman William H. Robinson, 35, of 2726 Chartiers avenue, attached to Engine Company No. 33, downtown.

Fire Capt. Michael J. Brown testified that Robinson was intoxicated at a fire at the Wabash Depot Tuesday night, insulted him and refused to let go of the hose line.

PUT IN CELL

Capt. Brown said he turned Robinson over to Policemen John Stankiewicz and Patrick O'Reilly and ordered them to place a charge of drunkenness against him.

Robinson was said to have been taken to Central Police Station and to have been put in a cell by Acting Sergt. James Fay without any charge having been entered on the docket.

Fire Chief John Heinz and Dr. Daniel E. Sable, police and fire surgeon, were summoned to examine Robinson, and afterwards Robinson was suspended from duty. He was later released from the police station.

When Mayor McNair heard of the case he called in Capt. Brown and asked why Robinson wasn't docketed at the police station. The Mayor ordered all the principals to appear this morning before Magistrate McGowan.

CRITICIZES POLICE

The Mayor called Acting Sergt. Fay and Patrolman Stankiewicz and O'Rielly before the bench and criticized them for not putting Robinson's name on the docket.

The Mayor charged the action left the city open to damage litigation and ordered that henceforth no mater who is arrested an entry should be made on the docket.

Fay told the Mayor that in cases where city firemen or policemen were arested for intoxication it was customary to turn them loose when they sobered up.

SAME AS ANY ONE ELSE

The Mayor declared that this procedure was wrong, that policemen or firemen should be treated the same as any one else.

Robinson then was re-arrested and his name placed on the docket on a charge of drunkenness. He was immediately arraigned before Magistrate McGowan.

Capt. Brown gave his testimony. Robinson denied that he had been intoxicated at the fire and charged the captain was "unreasonable."

McGowan dismissed Robinson with a reprimand.

Too Many Pauses For Laughter Slows Justice, Says Baer

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Way to beat any rap in this land is to prove that the cuckoos nested in your family tree.

The jury will burst into tears if you prove that your uncle slept with his shoes on.

No judge will convict you if your grandma had a double-jointed thumb.

These little tasty dabs of evidence were actually duly sworn, testified and recorded in our jolly old law courts.

In both cases the defendants were on trial for robbery and murder. That ain't hay.

Justice is slow because there are too many pauses for laughter.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Tom Coyne's Jail Term Held Up by Vote Trial

Tom Coyne, brother of Senator James J. Coyne, is under sentence to serve six months in jail for operating a gambling house in connection with his alleged part ownership of the swanky Monaca Club, but will not have to start his term immediately.

Sentencing Coyne yesterday Judge Thomas M. Marshall said he would allow him time to prepare his defense in an election case in which he is scheduled to go on trial in United States Court week after next.

Coyne was given the same sentence meted out to his alleged partners, Tom Dolan and Tom Goslin, after the "Three Toms" were found guilty of maintaining the gambling house and being common gamblers. The only difference was Coyne made a motion for a new trial and the others took their medicine.

Judge Marshall prefaced pronouncing sentence by handing down an opinion refusing the new trial. He said in this that the evidence against Coyne was sufficient to send the case to the jury for determination as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant.

Coyne was allowed until Friday to decide whether he is going to post bond for an appeal to the Superior Court.

Council Joins County In Public Works Suit

City Council has reversed its decision not to intervene in behalf of Allegheny County in the friendly suit designed to test the constitutionality of the proposed Allegheny County Authority.

Council in finance committee had voted not to take any part in the litigation before the State Supreme Court.

At the insistence of Council President Robert Garland, the action was recalled yesterday and Council instructed the City Solicitor to take appropriate action to intervene. Councilman P. J. McArdle alone voted against it.

A provision was attached to the resolution in which the city has reserved the right to approve or disapprove any specific project. The suit to test the Authority has been brought by Henry Tranter to obtain a decision which must be had before the federal government will furnish funds.

PINCHOT AIDES ASSAIL REED RECORD

Senator David A. Reed, like Ogden Mills, represents the reactionary political philosophy of the Hoover regime, Edward O. Tabor, independent leader, has charged.

In speeches about the county, Tabor, Frank O. Gangwisch, county commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars; Blair F. Gunther and J. M. Gelman, went to bat for the candidacy of Gifford Pinchot for United States Senate last night.

Mayor LaGuardia, of New York, has announced he will speak for Pinchot over WJZ, New York, at 7:15 p. m. (daylight time) today.

TABOR'S CHARGES

The smugness and selfishness of the leaders of the old order were largely responsible for the present economic suffering, Tabor declared. Yet, he said, Reed resists the liberal program of the national administration.

Pinchot's program, Tabor said, was in sympathy with the new order.

Gangwisch attacked Reed's attitude toward veterans.

Only once, he said, had Reed supported veterans' legislation, and that was to bolster his own political chances and deal a slap to Roosevelt.

Reed, Gangwisch charged, fought the bill to grant tubercular ex-service men at least $50 a month, and the amendment to help disabled veterans with their insurance.

VETERANS' ATTACK

Reed was opposed to increase of the benefits of the World War Veterans Act and fought bitterly against paying the adjusted compensation certificates in full in the winter of 1932, Gangwisch said.

His one "yes" on veteran legislation was for the economy act of March 15, 1933, by which disabled veterans' compensation was slashed 50 per cent and all other payments to veterans were virtually wiped out, Grangwisch declared.

Gelman said Reed's vote in the Senate had always been cast in favor of an increase in the income taxes of the man with the small income and a decrease in the tax of the man with an income of $100,000 a year or more.

REED BACKERS SLASH OUT AT PINCHOT

A broadside of accusations was directed today from the headquarters of Senator David A. Reed against the forces of Gov. Gifford Pinchot.

Francis D. Guthrie, Jr., county chairman of the Reed Volunteers, hurled the lie at Pinchot County Chairman Horace J. Thomas, Jr., for the statement that Mellon employes were being coerced into joining the Volunteers.

Raymond D. Evans, Reed campaign chairman, challenged Thomas to demand an immediate Senate investigation of the respective campaign expenditures of Reed and Pinchot, opposing senatorial candidates.

PINCHOT ACCUSED

The Governor is guilty of overworking women, in violation of National Recovery Act codes, Zeno Fritz charged.

The Governor's plan to use $6,000,000 for construction of rural roads was timed merely for political effect, according to J. B. McAdoo, of the Reed committee. He said if the Governor had kept politics out of the Civil Works Administration program, he wouldn't have to spend this sum to put men back to work.

Mrs. Walter L. Riggs declared that Pinchot's commissary system, through which he "insisted on feeding the unemployed at six cents a day" has proved a delusion and a snare, "badly designed to catch votes."

DENIES 'PRESSURE'

In denying the Thomas statement that Mellon employes were being put under pressure to sign up with the Volunteers, Guthrie admitted membership cards had been distributed "by the thousands" in the county. But, he said:

"I want to make it emphatic that the statement charging the Reed Volunteers with coercion of any Mellon employe is without foundation and a deliberate falsehood."

Guthrie also denied Mellon employes were being ordered to contribute to Reed campaign expenses.

Evans took up the other side of the story, charging that Pinchot was expending public money in his campaign by use of state telephones, by having two Boxing Commisisoners active in the campaign, and by placing "thousands of workers" on the state payrolls with the understanding they would support Pinchot.

Evans reiterated his statement that the Pinchot campaign was being run on payrollers' money, asserting that the assessment would bring in $250,000.

SHANNON DRIVES ON 'BOSSES'

Republicans will not follow the attempt of organization politicians to enforce their will on the party, Capt. Robert S. Cain has declared.

Speaking last night in behalf of the gubernatorial candidacy of Edward C. Shannon, Cain said an organization victory in the primary would mean defeat in November.

No bosses or cliques control Shannon, Cain asserted.

Saying that Shannon was far in the lead of his opponents, Cain declared two more withdrawals were expected in his favor "almost any hour."

Maj. Gen. Adelbert Cronkhite also spoke for Shannon last night, calling him a "real man," and absolutely qualified for the governorship.

Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell was chairman of today's noon meeting in Shannon headquarters, Magee Building. Assistant County Solicitor Mortimer B. Lesher and Attorney Charles G. Lane, Jr., spoke.

G. O. P. Workers Retained--Johnston

Democrats Get Only Newly-Created Jobs, He Says

The new administration at City Hall has kept the Department of Public Works payroll inherited from the Republican regime almost undisturbed, according to figures furnished by Director Leslie M. Johnston.

However, 236 new appointments have been made, representing jobs that have been added to handle the regular spring work program.

The new jobs are slightly less than 20 per cent of the department's labor list.

Although under severe pressure from all sides to dump out the laborers of the old administration and hire deserving Democrats, Director Johnston has taken the position and stuck to it that efficient men will be kept on the job regardless of politics.

He states his position thus:

"Any workman who is giving good service to the Department of Public Works need have no fear of being dismissed for political reasons.

"In making new appointments we have followed the general policy of giving the work to those persons instrumental in bringing about the change of administration.

"My political creed and my idea of patronage is that where men and women are to be employed for whatever reason by this department of the city, they should certainly be drawn from the rank and file of people who brought this political change about, consistent with efficiently carrying on the affairs of this department."

This, if adhered to, means a new deal for the laborers of the Public Works Departmen., who have no Civil Service protection and may be discharged at will by the director.

Mayor McNair has frequently been praised by Director Johnston for giving him a free hand in the department.

MILK MARKET GROUP NAMED

Aiming at action on violations of the milk control bill and prevention of "chiseling" among milk producers and distributors in this district, dairy farmers of 18 Western Pennsylvania counties have formed a marketing committee for distribution of dairy products under the new state milk control regulations.

The committee was named yesterday at a meeting of more than 150 producers at the Fort Pitt Hotel. The following were elected for one-year terms:

Raymond Steele, of Westmoreland County; A. S. Marburger, of Butler County, and A. B. Craig, of Allegheny County. Two active distributors also are to serve on the committee.

The Rev. Robert L. Cocklin, representing the Milk Control Board, addressed the meeting.

3 HELD IN THEFT, PAL GRILLED

Sam Tallenfield, 27, of 68 Arthur street, whose three alleged companions were held for court last night in Aliquippa on robbery charges, was to be questioned today by county detectives in connection with the robbery of several jewelry shop windows in the Pittsburgh district.

Those held last night by Justice of the Peace M. J. Kane, in Aliquippa, were John Krouse 31, of 108 Congress street; Harry Fox, 38, of Warrington avenue, and Fred Schell, 27, of 108 Epiphany street.

According to information, the trio was implicated by Tallenfield in the show window robberies of the shops of N. P. Landay and Morris Cline, at Aliquippa, April 28.

They denied the charges.

Tallenfield was returned to Pittsburgh for questioning in connection with other similar robberies.

Dewey Confident On Eve of Primary

Philip H. Dewey, candidate for renomination on the Republican ticket to Secretary of Internal Affairs, expressed himself in Harrisburg today as assured of victory. Dewey has been indorsed by the Pennsylvania State Grange. He has served in a number of county and state offices, being manager of the State Workmen's Insurance Fund under Gov. John S. Fisher.

Interference Charged In Relief Activities

There is too much political interference in relief work, according to C. C. Hamilton, candidate for Congress in the Thirty-third District. Hamilton promised to eliminate political jobs and direct relief money direct to a worthy cause.

PA. RUM SHOPS OPPOSED BY PHILLIPS

Opposition to the state being in the liquor business was expressed in a statement today by Thomas W. Phillips, Jr., former leader in the fight against prohibition and candidate for Republican nomination for Governor. He said:

"I am opposed to the state going into the liquor business or any other business that it can keep out of."

Government, he said, was none too efficient in itself, and when it entered business fields it was usually "scandalously extravagant."

STORES OPPOSED

He continued:

"Many people are opposed to the liquor business in all its phases and resent having their state take them into the liquor business against their will. No minority group should be unnecessarily offended."

Conditions surrounding state stores may now be clean, Phillips said, but:

"There is no other business in which the state might engage that offers so much inducement and opportunity for the grafter and crooked politician as the liquor business.

"A state liquor store might become the most corrupting influence in Pennsylvania politics."

GRAFT ASSAILED

Graft and corruption, Phillips asserted, could be overcome by lower taxes and reasonable regulations. The lawmakers' attempt to put a higher tax on liquor than the traffic would bear was of direct benefit to the bootlegger, he declared.

Whether he would recommend a change in liquor regulations if elected would depend on results obtained by the present system in Pennsylvania compared with results of other methods in other industrial states, Phillips said.

The Phillips candidacy was indorsed last night in a speech by Andrew B. Berger, of the Potter Title and Trust Company. Phillips, Berger said, had the courage, ability and experience needed for the governorship. Samuel Harden Church will speak for Phillips tonight.

Copeland Rally in Watt School Tonight

The final rally of the forces supporting Charles D. Copeland and Roland S. Morris for governor and United States Senator, respectively, will be held at the Watt Street School tonight.

John B. Sweeney and Mrs. Annette T. Johnson, candidates, respectively, for Democratic county chairman and vice chairman, have been invited to speak. Other speakers will be P. J. Clyde Randall, Mrs. Lucille Cuthbert, state secretary for the Colored New Deal Democrats; Homer S. Brown, president of the Pittsburgh branch of the National Association for the advancement of Colored People; Attorney Joseph W. Givens and Mrs. E. M. King.

Two More Quit, Ten Stay in G.O.P. Governor Race

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—(AP.)—Ten candidates remain in the fight for the Republican nomination for Governor, Representative Edward Lowber Stokes and Judge Albert S. C. Millar, both Philadelphians, having withdrawn late yesterday.

The battle of the aspirants for various state-wide offices continues unabated, however, with most of the contenders concentrating their fire in Eastern Pennsylvania.

Senator David A. Reed charged at Hazleton last night that he has "positive proof in writing" that the state Secretary of Revenue is assessing employes for contributions to the campaign of Gov. Gifford Pinchot. Pinchot is seeking Reed's seat in the Senate.

ASSAILS GOVERNMENT

Reed declared:

"Gov. Pinchot's panicky reply to my charge that he is holding up state employes for contributions to his campaign fund shows his realization that his broken promises have disgusted the people of the state.

"If the Governor thinks that this kind of politics is winning for him the support of all those employed by the state, he is in for a sad awakening. I know that they resent it bitterly that a millionaire like Pinchot should take advantage of his official position to extort campaign funds from the meagerly paid employes of the state."

PINCHOT SON SPEAKS

Pinchot was at his home in Milford, but his 16-year-old son, Gifford, Jr., made his debut as a political speaker in an address at Selins Grove. Supporting his father, he stressed the need for elimination of stream pollution and protection of fish and game.

Joseph R. Grundy, Bristol manufacturer and former United States Senator, urged Lancaster workers to campaign for Reed, citing the Senator's position as ranking member of the Finance Committee and his long service.

Reed is scheduled to speak at Pottsville today; Pinchot, at Scranton.

Neither Stokes nor Millar announced support of any other candidate for Governor, but one of the Judge's chief supporters, former Sheriff William J. Hamilton, called for nomination of Attorney General William A. Schnader.

Withdrawing as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor, Hamilton threw his support in this contest to State Senator Harry B. Scott.

LABOR IN FIGHT OVER PINCHOT

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania Federation of Labor today decides its stand on candidates at next week's state primaries.

A convention fight is promised on a resolution, tabled yesterday, indorsing Gov. Gifford Pinchot for the Republican nomination for the United States Senate now held by David A. Reed. Supporters of the resolution have declared their intention to press for its approval today regardless of action of the committee on political policies.

This committee, to which is delegated first consideration of all political questions, has been studying the field of candidates, including two prominent labor leaders, Thomas Kennedy, mine union leader and candidate for Lieutenant Governor, and State Representative Norbert J. Fitzgerald, railroad labor man running for Secretary of Internal Affairs. Kennedy and Fitzgerald are Democrats.

THOMAS HINTED FOR JUDGE

Announcement of Horace J. Thomas, Jr's. appointment to the vacancy in Common Pleas Court will be made in a day or so, Attorney Joseph I. Winslow last night said he had been reliably informed.

Gov. Pinchot held up the appointment 12 weeks to gain political advantages, but a wave of public indignation had forced him to decide to make it before the primary, Winslow said.

Thomas, Winslow said, was a former law associate of Judge Ralph H. Smith, Pinchot leader.

Reynolds to Fight Assembly Gag Rule

A pledge to fight for abolition of "gag" rules in the General Assembly heads the platform of Harold Earl Reynolds, candidate for Legislature in the Seventh District. He advocates making the city manager plan and proportional representation optional for local governments.

M'NAIR BACKS POLICASTRO

Frank Policastro, candidate for Democratic nomination to Congress in the Thirty-third District, has received formal notice of support from Mayor McNair. The Mayor wrote:

"I am for Policastro because he is my friend and because he favors low tariffs and free trade . . . payment of the bonus . . . the graded tax plan . . . support of the President."

At the same time John E. F. Byrnes withdrew his candidacy for Congress in the Thirty-third District in favor of Policastro and to aid McNair.

Women's League Hears Candidates

Candidates—or their spokesmen—for the four major political offices addressed the Women's Political Education League in Y. W. C. A., Chatham street, at noon today. Candidates for other positions were invited to attend, but not to speak.

Wants to Extend Permanent Registry

William L. Brown, candidate for Legislature in the Thirteenth District, is emphasizing complete support of the National Recovery Act in his platform. He wants permanent registration extended to state-wide scope.

Veterans Indorse Senator Armstrong

State Senator Joseph G. Armstrong, candidate for re-election in the Thirty-eighth District, has announced his unanimous indorsement by Arthur C. Woestehoff Post No. 435, Veterans of Foreign Wars. He has also been indorsed by Local Union No. 6, Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America.

Guffey and Earle To Speak at Rally

With Joseph F. Guffey, for United States Senator, and George H. Earle, for Governor, as featured speakers, Democrats will hold their big pre-primary mass meeting in North Side Carnegie Hall tonight.

Philadelphia City Controller S. Davis Wilson will talk. Others are Eddie Dowling, theatrical celebrity and candidate for Senator in Rhode Island, and Chester A. Rhodes, candidate for Superior Court.

LET'S LOOK AT THE RECORD!

This good old reliable yardstick as to a man's experience, worth, ability, honesty, independence and liberal understanding can aptly and advantageously be used in sizing up the candidates for the Republican nomination for governor.

In the absence of a worthy record, the tactics of such a candidate and his supporters are usually to make wild promises, call names and make pleas for useless debate, hoping this deficiency will be overlooked.

William A. Schnader Has a Record . . . a Record of Achievements and Service—Not Just Promises

His record is not a mere political catch slogan nor in some remote field having no bearing upon the position he seeks.

It is a record of many genuine services to the state and all of its citizens. It is one of hard work, loyalty to his oath, devotion to his ideals, liberalness and independence, with a broad, sympathetic understanding of the needs of the people of this State.

Here is just a part of that record in his 11 years in the Attorney General's office under Governors Fisher and Pinchot:

SOCIAL: He wrote the legislation which assured support to thousands of aged men and women and saved them from the poorhouse . . . drafted bills assuring state assistance to the blind . . . drafted much of the clean elections legislation . . . aided the juvenile court establishment.

TAXPAYERS: He put Pennsylvania on a firm business basis with fiscal and administrative codes, drafted by him, which serve as models throughout the United States . . . won for the taxpayers $14,500,000 from the estate of the late John T. Dorrance, after a vigorous fight in the State Supreme Court.

DEPOSITORS and INVESTORS: He saved to depositors hundreds of thousands of dollars by his watchful supervision of legal matters in liquidation of closed banks . . . protected bank depositors and building and loan association shareholders with new codes drawn by him for both types of activities . . . drafted the model law governing home and foreign corporations which requires them to register with the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

VETERANS: He discovered that the proposed $25,000,000 bonus bill for former soldiers failed to include dependents of deceased veterans, and protected their rights by insisting that such a provision be inserted.

WORKERS: Won the fight in the United States Supreme Court to prohibit sale of Alabama prison-made goods in Pennsylvania, thus barring chain-gang products and protecting state employers and employes from their competition . . . drafted the act creating the Milk Control Board which protects the farmer and guarantees fair prices to everyone concerned with dairy farming and marketing.

ALL OF US: Established an 11-year record of ability to draft, to press to enactment, and to enforce a variety of legislation interpreting accurately the liberal spirit of today.

They can HUFF and they can PUFF but they can't blow that RECORD down and that is why we say:

Earle appeared with his campaign teammates, Joseph F. Guffey, running for the United States Senate, and Chester H. Rhodes, for Superior Court.

Woman Dry Chief Displays McNair Gift Liquor

YORK, Pa., May 10.—(AP.)—Mrs. Ella B. Black, of Beaverdale, president of the Pennsylvania Women's Christian Temperance Union, is displaying what she says is the same bottle of state store liquor that Mayor McNair, of Pittsburgh, offered her at a convention there a few weeks ago.

The Pittsburgh Mayor at that time used the bottle as an exhibit in a speech criticizing the state liquor store system.

Mrs. Black used it for the same purpose last night, addressing the Pennsylvania branch, Women's Missionary Association of the United Brethren Church.

SHUNS PLEDGES IN CAMPAIGN

Scoring promises made during campaigns only to be broken, Violet Stewart Happer, a candidate for the State Legislature from the Twelfth District, in an address in Overbrook said:

"There is no use making a lot of promises during a campaign that will only be broken if you are fortunate enough to reach the office you are seeking. Every mail brings questionnaires from various organizations, and while most of the questions to be answered are for the good of the community, we must all admit that each day brings changes.

"Two years ago, all we heard was the City Manager Plan; no one would be sent to Harrisburg who did not pledge support to the City Manager Bill; now when I believe you will all agree that it would not hurt Pittsburgh to have a City Manager or a manager of some kind, what has become of the bill?

"I am for all good legislation and always have been; I am interested in anything that will benefit the people, and if elected to the office I seek will represent my district to the best of my ability, consulting with my constituents as to their desires and serve them accordingly."

TAX CUT URGED BY MARGIOTTI

BLOOMSBURG, May 10.—(AP.)—Charles J. Margiotti, Republican candidate for Governor, proposes a constitutional limit of 15 mills tax on real estate in Pennsylvania.

He advanced the proposal yesterday in campaign addresses in Bloomsburg, and Berwick, where he also advocated state payment of school teachers' minimum salaries with taxation on "that 60 per cent of our wealth which now escapes its fair share of the cost of local government."

The Pittsburgh and Punxsutawney attorney assailed two of his opponents for the nomination Lieut. Gov. Edward C. Shannon and Attorney General William A. Schnader, as candidates of "the political bosses and the money barons."

Congressman Louis T. McFadden, speaking at the same meetings, criticied the New Deal. He said the limits proposed on agricultural production are "tyranny" and declared national debt will rise to $40,000,000,000 under the present administration.

BANKER LAUDS SCHNADER

G. A. Price, vice president of the Peoples Pittsburgh Trust Company, today credited William A. Schnader with helping to eliminate the personal property tax on interest-bearing bank accounts.

Speaking at noon in the Schnader-for-Governor headquarters at 516 Grant street, Price said:

"In 1933 I was one of a group of bankers who called upon the Governor to ask him to include in his call for the special session of the Legislature the consideration of the repeal of the four mills personal property tax on interest-bearing bank accounts.

"The Governor called in to the conference Mr. Schnader as his Attorney General because numerous legal questions were involved and I can testify again to the co-operation of Mr. Schnader in removing from the banks and taxpayers a most unjust tax."

Zeiger to Address Italo-American Club

SAMPLE BALLOT SUPPLY READY

While candidates were getting their supplies of specimen ballots today at the county elections bureau, preparations for the primaries next Tuesday kept the Registration Commission busy setting up the new permanent system.

Special clerks are placing the registration records into the master and duplicate books and will be turned over to the election bureau Saturday for distribution to the 408 polling places.

A checkup on the registration so far has indicated it is the cleanest in many years, though officials found several duplications.

MALONE LAUDS MARGIOTTI

Charles J. Margiotti is the only candidate thoroughly aligned with the trend of the times, James F. Malone, former president of City Council declared today.

Malone particularly praised Margiotti's tax reduction program. He will speak over KDKA at 10:30 p. m. today in behalf of Margiotti's governorship campaign.

In Johnstown Margiotti was indorsed by Dwight R. Davis, president of the Cambria County Tax Justice League, claiming 5,000 membership. Davis declared Margiotti represented all the principles of the league.

Pinchot Makes Mother's Day Appeal

HARRISBURG, May 10.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot in his call for Pennsylvanians to observe next Sunday as Mother's Day suggests that "those who can no longer reach our mothers with messages or tributes" turn their attention to the needy.

There is no better way to honor such a mother, he says, "than by doing what she would have liked to do for some poor mother whose children are hungry or sick."

MOTORMAN LOSES 38 LBS. EXCESS WEIGHT—EXPECTS TO LOSE MORE

This veteran Street Car Man says: "Last year I lost 38 pounds on 3 jars of SYL-VETTE, yet all I did was to take it in place of one meal each day. Getting rid of this surplus weight surely helped me a lot in my work. I feel better, am more alert, and now get around fine. Originally I weighed a little over 300 pounds. During the winter I did not attempt to reduce, but I am now starting SYL-VETTE again and expect to lose from 40 to 60 pounds more. I highly recommend this tasty food substitute, which not only takes the place of a meal, but is so nourishing, too."

Life Not Rosy-Painted Dream, Wife Finds

A young married woman craving to be more happy. She has been married almost four years, and life has not turned out the rosy-tinted dream she anticipated.

She has a small son, a trifle over two years of age, and, to be sure, he is woven irrevocably into the pattern of her everyday existence.

Miss Brunot

The trouble is, her husband is one of those men who believes a man's world is the whole darn world, and that woman's world is just the little corner he accords her . . . A wife is a chattel to him, just as the cave man's wife was to him.

Do you get the picture, sisters . . . Of course you do. Maybe you have such a man at home, or at least among your relatives. You're chuckling all to yourself as you read for women have gone on in the way of love. But many men haven't.

Dear Miss Brunot:

I wish I could talk this over with you instead of writing it. Yet being that I can't, I'll join the Speak Up, Sister column. My husband and I have been married almost four years, and we are 26 and 22 respectively. We have a fine little boy, just past two. Here is my trouble: We are always doing everything just the way my husband wants it done.

I usually give in rather than argue, as arguing does me absolutely no good.

WANTS LITTLE AFFECTION

But here's the thing that hurts me most. Whenever I wish to show him a little affection, I certainly am cold shouldered. Only when he is blue is my affection welcome. Otherwise he can't be bothered. But when he wishes to be affectionate, no matter if I am tired and busy, I must drop everything, and be tickled pink.

My greatest desire is to have a happy home and a truly loving companionship between my husband and myself. I have tried to explain my feelings and to come to an understanding, but to no avail. I have been letting it all pass and have tried not to be upset about these things for the past year. Yet I find my love for him dying.

This is not dramatic. It is the truth.

I know I am not without fault, but at least I am willing to try and do something about it. My husband, though, greatly resents criticism from anyone.

He was wonderful to me before we were married and he wanted me to marry him very badly. I always keep up my personal appearances, so that has nothing to do with it. I always remember his birthdays, etc. But I guess he has lost his calendar. Dear Miss Brunot, what shall I do. He has many good traits, but his bad ones are hurting me terribly. Thanking you, UNHAPPY.

Maybe some of the other sisters who are married and have been wives a long while, will speak up and help you. Many women, dear Unhappy, have gone through just what you are now suffering. For there are many husbands exactly like yours.

MAY BECOME REMISS

Nature made man the pursuer, and when he has won, he is very liable to cease overworking in the game of love. And especially is this true when a fellow has courted strenuously. The easy-going wooer often makes the kindliest husband. Having a little more of the feminine in his makeup, he has a more understanding heart where women are concerned.

Betwen you and me, to make a woman happy, there must be a lot of tenderness and chumlike affection in her home. It is what we all dream of. And when we meet an ardent sweetheart who pours words of undying love into our ears, we cling to them as if we had found the buoy afloat on the sea of life always. And often the sad story follows, just as you relate. For it is then that the man becomes remiss.

Many husbands forget birthdays. They have to be reminded a couple of weeks before. Even then a sensible wife suggests by many subtle little ways the GREAT DAY up to the very eve of the big event. Of course she doesn't tell these maneuvers of hers to everybody . . she just SHOWS THE PRESENT.

DON'T NAG HUSBAND

You say your husband ADMITS he cared greatly for you . . . And your saying that lets me into the secret that you NAG him along the line of his indifference. That never gets a wife anywhere. Neither do curtain lectures. All men go on the theory that these are to be listened to, and forgotten.

The thing for you to do if you want to keep on being at least a little happy, is to conform to your husband's method of love making. And not to criticize him when he doesn't fall for yours. Why waste your words? Also interest yourself in your growing child, in books, in clubs and parties with other women. This is a big world, and when your own little corner disappoints you, you don't have to forsake it. Instead just open the windows and let in a little of the outside air and sunshine.

You see, sister, I don't think you have such a bad husband. I think him quite average. Of course it is chagrinning to find courtship doesn't last. But then after all, a man reasons, why pursue what you've got. He works for you, he protects you with his name. And if he doesn't crave a lot of affection, well, just don't give it to him.

What Is Your Idea of Flirtation, Girls? Fay King Queries

By FAY KING

It is only natural for young persons looking their best to expect admiration from others like themselves.

Bright eyes, smiling lips and young hearts attract each other. If they come together for a little talk and walk, without being introduced, this is called flirtation, and frowned upon.

Yet many worthy friendships began so. Some ended in happy marriage. But then the flirtation is denied. It is usually claimed some friend introduced them.

Great caution must be used in flirtations. Character must be proved before real friendship is possible.

Believe the best of each other. Be respectful, and fair. Better to be esteemed as prudent than to be disdained as a common "pick-up."

Let your actions be above reproach, which alone will prove your worth.

A Sequel to Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Harry Starts to Relieve Hugh

That something urgent, though as yet unexplained to the rest of us, lay behind my father's mandate to Harry Underwood was plain in the very timber of his voice, as he laid an injunction upon the big man to tell Hugh not to worry about speed laws in his return to the farm.

It was equally plain to me, however, and I guessed to Lillian also, that fear of Lee Chow or of any of his agents had no part in my father's directions. Otherwise he would not have dispatched Harry Underwood, the man of greatest physical prowess in the house, to summon Hugh home.

TO GIVE JIM HELPER

There was a bit of hesitancy in Harry's manner, however, as in obedience to my father's mandate he moved toward the door.

"You're sure he's all right in there with only Jim to guard him?"

"If your knots hold," my father retorted—and I fancied I saw a faint twinkle in his eyes, signal of the hidden veil of merriment that sometimes bubbles up irrepressibly in his most strenuous moments.

"They'll hold, all right," Harry said grimly, "but I'm here to tell you that Lee Chow has that old Machiavelli gink backed off the boards for cute tricks. Jim, under some circumstances, would be an easily worked puzzle for him."

"But here's somebody that wouldn't," Lillian interposed softly, as down the hall we saw Katie approaching, in her hands a tray with a pitcher of hot milk Lillian had ordered for me, and on her face an expression of discontent.

"Try her, Chief!" Lillian urged softly. "She's simply dying of curiosity to get into that room, and she wouldn't let Lee Chow put anything over on her! I'll back her against all the sapient Orientals on this green earth."

Into my father's eyes flashed a look of decision.

"Katie," he said, as my little maid came into the room and set the tray on the table, "would you like to do a piece of detective work for me?"

Into Katie's eyes flashed a look of joy as supreme as can come to a human being.

"You—you mean me to help you?" she asked incredulously.

"Yes, I mean just that, Katie," he said smiling. "You know, of course, that Lee Chow is in Mr. Graham's room, and that Jim is in there watching him.

'DETECTIVE' KATIE

"Yah! Me, I know dot," Katie said, a trace of sullenness creeping again into her voice. "Eef you ask me, I tink somebody else ought to be in dot room beside dot Jeem. Dot Lee Chow, he outsmart Jeem efery time he open hees mout. Dot vun smardt Chink, dot Lee Chow; und dot Jeem, vile he best mans in vurld, ven he coom oop against somebody like dot Chink, he shoost vun great beeg dumb bell."

"I don't agree with you on that point, Katie," my father said with sternness, although I saw his lips twitching, "and I don't want ever to hear you speak in that disrespectful way of your husband again. But I do think that I need two people in that room with Lee Chow, one of them a woman, so I am going to ask you to go in there with Jim and help him watch Lee Chow. But there are two things you must promise me first."

Katie's eyes were dancing with gleeful triumph.

"Me, I promise anyting," she said, "even eef you ask me to cut off mine right arm. Shoost to tink dot I kin go in und show Jeem dot he's not only pebble on dees beach—dot I got a job detecatuffing, too! Maybe, I don't crow some, shoost like bantam rooster!"

"But that is just what you must promise, Katie," my father said sternly. "You are not to crow over Jim one bit. Otherwise, I can't let you help me."

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Bride's Costume

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Would a swagger suit in this new shade of green be appropriate for a quiet, informal wedding? I am to be married the first part of next month. L.

If your wedding is to be very informal, this costume will be appropriate.

Eating Asparagus

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What is the correct way to eat asparagus? W.

We should eat asparagus with the fork. If we eat it in our fingers, it is an unpleasant sight, for the process is a messy one, certain to be "drippy."

Contract Bridge

-:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Choice of an Opening Lead

I have often discussed the importance of the Opening lead. The choice of the correct suit, and in some cases even the correct card in the suit, often determines the success or failure of the contract. When partner has bid, often the burden is lifted from the shoulders of the Opening leader, and, lacking another and better choice, he leads, as a matter of course, the suit named by his partner. However, when the only bidding has been by the adversaries and a game contract at notrump has been reached after possibly only one suit has been shown, it is wise for the leader to consider all the elements of bidding, the bids that were not made as well as those that were, in connection with his own holding before choosing the suit or the card.

There are some players, notably Mr. Walter Malowan, who seek to so direct the bidding that the eventual contract is the hardest of all for their adversaries to successfully defend. There is something, no doubt, in this view, and the hand below is an example of a contract of three notrump made with an overtrick, which contract, if the player in the West had made the correct and logical choice of an Opening lead, or even if he had shifted to the right suit after regaining the lead, must inevitably have been defeated.

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

	♠ K 6 5 ♡ K ◇ A Q 9 5 4 ♣ A 10 9 3
♠ 9 7 4 ♡ A 9 3 2 ◇ 10 3 2 ♣ Q J 4	North West East South	♠ A J 10 3 2 ♡ J 6 5 4 ◇ J 8 ♣ K 7
	♠ Q 8 ♡ Q 10 7 6 ◇ K 7 6 ♣ 8 6 5 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding is slightly strong by North and South, but possibly a little timid by East, who might have prevented the game contract had he made a slightly daring Overcall of one spade over the Opening diamond bid.

The West player studied a long time before making any lead at all, and eventually, of all cards, chose the club Queen. Mr. Malowan won with the Ace and immediately returned a club, which East won with the King. East now returned a heart, which West won with the Ace, returning a heart. Had West, even at this point, shifted to a spade it would not have been too late. However, on the play of the heart South won with the Queen and entered Dummy to establish his fourth club. West, taking the club Knave, finally shifted to a spade, but the ship had sailed. Declarer won five diamonds, two clubs, two hearts and one spade to fulfill his contract with an overtrick.

Some players might say that the choice of a lead is not clearly indicated, but, as a matter of fact, it is. In the first place the club Opening is very bad. It might quite easily, on the bidding, deprive West of any club trick whatever. The diamond lead cannot be recommended as North has rebid the suit and South's bid of two notrump over two diamonds clearly indicates some kind of fit. The heart does not suggest itself as a strong Opening either. Consequently the wisest policy for West is one of "watchful waiting" — in other words, to gracefully exit from his hand by the lead of "top of nothing" in a suit which neither North nor South was strong enough to bid. It is true that it might not work but it also is true that it at least presents the best hope of doing no harm with the Opening lead.

Tomorrow's Hand

East, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ Q 9 6 5 ♡ J 8 ◇ 10 8 6 2 ♣ K 6 5
♠ A 8 3 ♡ K 9 6 ◇ A 7 3 ♣ A 9 8 7	North West East South	♠ K 10 4 2 ♡ 2 ◇ K J 9 5 ♣ J 10 4 3
	♠ J 7 ♡ A Q 10 7 5 4 3 ◇ Q 4 ♣ Q 2

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 10.—(AP)—The Democratic nomination for United States Senator from Indiana, R. Earl Peters believed today was within his reach as the result of Tuesday's primary election.

Peters, former state Democratic chairman whose senatorial aspirations are opposed by Gov. Paul V. McNutt, claimed election of 861 delegates who will support him in the party's convention here June 12, at which the nomination will be made. He will need 1,067 votes to be nominated.

The Governor and his secretary, Pleas Greenlee, who carried on an active campaign to elect delegates opposed to Peters, withheld comment. Peters said his estimate was based on results from 39 of the state's 92 counties.

PROSECUTOR'S KIN SLAIN

PARIS, May 11.—(AP.)—Rene Henriot, public prosecutor of Lorient, is searching for the slayer of his daughter-in-law, 19-year-old Mme. Michel Henriot, who was shot down mysteriously in her farm home while trying to telephone for aid.

Although Rene is the brother of Deputy Philippe Henriot, who almost fought a duel with another deputy recently over the Stavisky pawnshop scandal, police discarded a belief that political significance attached to the crime and attributed it to a tramp or a demented prowler.

The body was discovered by the young woman's husband, who left her alone in the farmhouse while he went duck shooting.

Deputy Henriot is a rightist and a violent critic of government officials connected with the Stavisky fiasco.

PARIS DISPLAYS 'BURNED' BOOKS

PARIS, May 10.—(AP.)—Copies of books burned in Germany a year ago to "purge the intellectual life of the Reich" are on the shelves of an unusual library opened here today.

An international committee, of which the famous German writer Heinrich Mann is president, has collected more than 20,000 copies of books destroyed at the ceremonial burnings. The opening of the library is to take place on the first anniversary of the destruction.

Among the volumes in the new collection are works of Dr. Albert Einstein, Helen Keller, Emil Ludwig, Sigmund Freud, Karl Marx, Nikolai Lenin, Leon Trotzky, Karl Liebknecht, Rosa Luxemburg, Franz Boas and Jack London.

Auto Crash Curb Seen By Trans-U. S. Roads

System Advocated By Sun-Telegraph Wins Backing

A system of national highways running from coast to coast and from the Canadian border to Mexico, such as advocated by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and associated Hearst newspapers, would do much to reduce the great number of automobile fatalities each year, Robert L. Wickline, of the Pittsburgh Motor Club, declared in a radio address yesterday. Mr. Wickline, who is secretary of the club's board of directors and chairman of the highway safety committee, spoke over radio station WCAE at 12:15.

Mr. Wickline pointed out that a majority of automobile accidents occur on open roads, due to running off the highway, passing cars on curves and grades and crossing from one traffic lane to another. He declared that if roads such as proposed by the Hearst newspapers were built straight and with the least number of hills, there would be far less accidents. He also pointed out that such national highways would be much wider than present roads, with lanes plainly marked, reducing the danger of running off the road and head-on collisions.

This is the fourth of a series of Safety Cartoons drawn by a CWA artist for the Better Traffic Committee as an educational aid in reducing the growing number of traffic accidents in Pittsburgh. The artist, Frank McFeatters, was one of 100 CWA workers assigned to the Traffic Committee and his art ability was an accidental discovery.

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, May 10.—(AP.)—(Via Mackey Radio.)—Admiral Richard E. Byrd, isolated 124 miles south of here, keps in touch with this base and the world by working a wireless key with fingers numbed by cold.

The temperature in the shack which is his home and workshop remains at about 20 degrees above zero, he reported yesterday, while outside temperatures range from 40 to 61 degrees below.

Admiral Byrd might be more comfortable if he used more fuel, but he is conserving every resource, he reported, declaring:

"I am enjoying myself. Besides, the meteorological observations keep me busy."

At the base here the expedition has completed the building of "dog town," a system of tunnels and excavations in the snow to quarter the 126 huskies brought to the South Polar region.

CITY MAY BACK WORKS SUIT

The city of Pittsburgh is expected to take action Monday to reverse its position and support the county in arguments before the State Supreme Court on the legality of the Allegheny County Authority, it was learned today.

The constitutionality of the Authority was challenged by Henry Tranter, who instituted a taxpayer's suit attacking the legality of the act setting up the Authority.

The city is expected to join the county in the arguments upholding the Authority before the Supreme Court during the week of May 21.

McKeesport and other communities also have indicated their support for the county.

A GAS REFRIGERATOR . . .

for THREE good reasons

BEFORE you buy any refrigerator, you owe it to yourself—and to your pocketbook—to see the Gas Refrigerator, the new refrigerator that in many respects is as far ahead of other types as they are ahead of the old ice box.

This new Gas Refrigerator gives you every convenience, every feature, and every service that you can get from the very best refrigerators of other types on the market today. And, in addition, it gives you three vital features you cannot possibly get in any other refrigerator—an operating cost of only 2c a day, permanent silence, and complete elimination of all moving parts.

This means extremely low cost refrigeration. It means complete freedom from the operating noise of other refrigerators—the noise that comes from moving parts and which therefore cannot help but get louder and louder as the refrigerator gets older. It means no annoying vibration, no radio interference and no moving parts to get out of order and to require costly repairs and replacements.

Only 2¢ a day to operate!

Permanently Silent!

No Moving Parts!

It means, in a nutshell, better, more modern refrigeration, as any owner will tell you.

See the new Gas refrigerator at your dealers, or your Gas Company—now. Or send in the coupon below for complete details of sizes, prices, models, and easy purchase terms.

THROUGH THE SPYGLASS

-:- Viewing the New -:-

You little shoppers who want to learn the names of the shops whose items are listed in this column day by day . . . call GRANT 6500 . . . and ASK Or send in a stamped self-addressed envelope for your SPYGLASS. FOR THE reply. THE SPYGLASS is always on the alert, peering out new "finds" . . . and you will be answered promptly!

* * *

One last gasp on account of Mother's Day . . . and then we betake ourselves to the realms of NEW CLOTHES.

The Mother's Day angle being one of flowers—combination boxes and plants, first . . . at one of the town's most attractive spots. We have had our weather eye upon this item for over a week now—lantanas, fuchias, ageratums, and others to thrill the hearts of mothers who know the flower alphabet and realize that all of these can be taken from their original boxes and planted right into the family flower pot! $3.00 and thereabouts . . . with simple foliage plants to come as low as $1.

Too . . . gardenia plants are still filling the air with their sweetness, and are to be had for not-too-many of your hard earned ducats.

* * *

Now for this thing of new duds. Rub-a-dub-duds (please make allowances for our foolishness . . . it must be the Spring!) For these are all washable!

And remembering our promise to you of the over-size 38 figure . . . we have found quite swellish cottons in cord lace effects . . . all-over embroidery batistes . . . smart prints. The styles being nice ones for mamma-types . . . fichus, surplices, short sleeves of good cut, wise ruffles in wise spots! And they're sizes 40 to 48 . . . at a price that's as joyful as ever mind imagined—$5.95.

* * *

And for you again . . . BLOUSES! We hear from various quarters that a blouse of crisp wash-fabric . . . in large size . . . at low price . . . that does not billow-before-and-aft, is QUITE a blouse!

Therefore we claim a little glory . . . for ourselves as well as the store which presents this collection for the larger woman, priced at $1.25, and NO MORE! For these are crisp, clever little joblets . . . with double-breasted effects wearing bits of glass buttons by way of sparkle . . . with puffed sleeves now and then (not TOO puffed either) . . . with colored stripes going zig, then going zag to liven them up . . . in cross-barred voile as to the fabric . . . and pastel shades of all sorts. Sizes to 46.

* * *

Having done right by all you "Nells" of the larger figger . . . we now turn our spyglass to the neat and natty creature that can "get by" with something as grand and gloriously new and daring as a white corduroy skirt!

Ahhh! What knockouts these are . . . and if we were anywhere but plowing our way through newspapers day by day, we'd have one of them . . . bet your little bootees! For they button all the way down your middle . . . plink, plank, plunk! And they come in sizes 26 to 32! And the last time they appeared, frantic would-be buyers all but devoured each other, grabbing them so fast that by noon they were "all" (Pennsylvania Dutch expression, meaning "gone!").

They're only $1.98 . . . if you'll believe it. And while we won't do any swearing to this . . . we have it from a pretty good source that they'll wash if you're a careful girl. Remember . . . we don't say they WILL . . . but they can be done. (If you have a way with you and the wash tub!)

* * *

Have you seen the new string bags with matching hats? They're all shades . . . pastel and dark ones . . . the bags with snap tops and handles . . . the hats in two styles . . . typical beret or turban . . . and the combination of the two creating quite a furore 'round these parts nowadays at $1.64.

* * *

Yoicks, yoicks! No . . . NOT the fox . . . the jodphur sets we've found are the cause of this yodel this time!

$5.95 the set . . . for whipcord jodphur breeches . . . vest and jockey cap to match. Tan . . . brown . . . yellow and only a very, very few of them. Don't expect to find ANY if you wait! The sizes are 14 to 20. Gallop forth, little riders!

THERE IS NO SUCH THING AS A HEATLESS PERMANENT WAVE

BUT: There are many socalled heater-less methods. This is accomplished by having electric heating elements in the rod on which the hair is wound or in the pad which is wrapped around the hair. Then again you have the non-electric heating pads containing calcium oxide or more commonly known as lime. When lime comes in contact with moisture it reacts and gives off considerable heat. The heat generated by one of these pads is not as consistent as an electric element, so the hairdresser is sometimes at a loss to know why these pads go dead. It is simply that they absorbed moisture from the air. The control of heat is so important because it is the steaming of the hair which gives you a beautiful and lasting wave.

Permanent wave solutions are used for the purpose of softening the hair in order to cut down the time required for steaming, nothing more or less. It is a fact of course that some of these solutions are compounded with the idea only of reducing the steaming time to a minimum and are consequently very injurious. My seven years of research and the study of chemistry as it applies to permanent waving have proven to me the fallacy of selling my clientele with tricky statements such as the one we stress above.

PALMOLIVE!

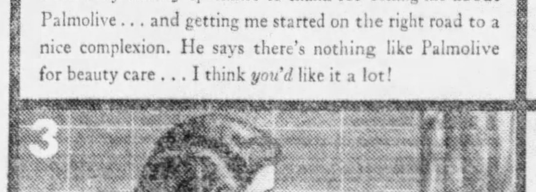
1

I have my beauty specialist to thank for telling me about Palmolive . . . and getting me started on the right road to a nice complexion. He says there's nothing like Palmolive for beauty care . . . I think you'd like it a lot!

2

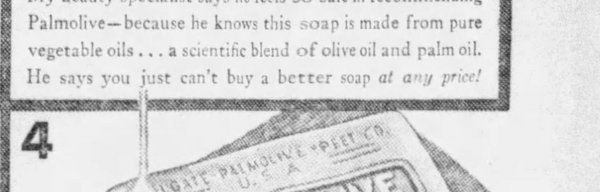
My beauty specialist says he feels so safe in recommending Palmolive—because he knows this soap is made from pure vegetable oils . . . a scientific blend of olive oil and palm oil. He says you just can't buy a better soap at any price!

3



Palmolive just practically made over all my ideas about baths . . . and what it means to get really clean. You can't imagine how penetrating and deep-cleansing Palmolive's rich, velvety lather is . . . and yet how very gentle!

4



It cleanses so deeply .. keeps complexions so lovely

Things That Burn Me Up and Knock Me Cold

The legends right along have been that all wars are for profit—to munitions makers, but never before did I realize how true was that story. Until I shivered and shuddered all the way through George Seldes' new book "Iron, Blood and Profits" (Harper's). Imagine learning this fact—that many of our marines were killed in Haiti and Nicaragua by the enemy whose guns were made in New England.

The Hotchkiss Company, of Paris, is delivering 200,000,000 francs worth of machine guns to Japan.

The Lindbergh motor and other American airplanes have been sold and are being manufactured by the Japanese military.

Nitrates for making T. N. T. have been shipped in large quantities to Japan.

American war exports to Japan total millions.

The battleship Maine was the first ship armed with Harvey steel and that Harvey immediately sold his patent to Germany, Britain, etc.

In 1916 10,000 Americans more than in 1914 declared million dollar incomes, made out of the war trade.

Thousands of German soldiers were killed by Vickers hand grenades made with Krupp fuses, and that Krupp got 123,000,000 shillings royalty from Britain after the war.

Kaiser Wilhelm II was the largest stockholder in Krupps and made money on the great armament race which Sir Edward Grey called the main cause of the World War.

A woman was responsible for Basil Zaharoff's rise to power. He met the Marquesa on a train; she got him an order for $5,000,000 from Spain, and he married her 40 years later.

Zaharoff's companies made $7,000,000,000 in the World War.

The munitions lobby in Washington is considered the strongest in the world, next to the one in the French Chamber of Deputies.

Presidents Wilson, Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt have favored embargoes on American arms to South America and other countries, but resolutions have invariably been defeated in Congress.

Lino Bartoli, first violinist of the Wachter Quartet and of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, gave a belated concert in Carnegie Lecture Hall last night. In spite of the waning season there was a fair audience.

Mr. Lissfelt

Bartoli's program was built upon two undying works, the Ciaccona of Vitali and the Mendelssohn Concerto. The second half of the recital showed negligible trifles.

In Bartoli's playing one is immediately aware of a deep musical nature and of the Italian sense of elastic phrase. His tone is big, vigorous, though sometimes roughened by his bowing technique. Last night his intonation was more uniformly accurate than hertofore. The variations in the Ciaccona gave him his best opportunity.

Earl Mitchell played accompaniments.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

Rebel Days Are Past

Cinemaland's rebel ranks always have been well filled. There have been, to cite but a few, Constance Bennett, Margaret Sullavan and Katherine Hepburn. They always have had a way of making things exciting for fellow workers, the press and the public.

Barbara Stanwyck used to be in that category, but is not any more. Stanwyck, the tempestuous young star who began her Hollywood career by consigning the head of a studio to nether regions, didn't think she was getting a square deal.

She battled the Hollywood press, individually and in groups, because she resented "prying." She did that long before La Hepburn and La Sullavan ever were heard of.

Miss Stanwyck, nee Ruby Stevens, Irish lass from Brooklyn, has learned the idleness of fighting over trivialities, and those things which aroused her fury a few years ago are only trivial today. The chip on her shoulders has been knocked off.

"What's the use?" she grins. "Nothing I could ever say or do could change this funny town of Hollywood. I've learned the gift of evasion.

"Every so often I hear the rumor that my marriage isn't as happy as it might be. Instead of becoming scorched, as I used to, I just think 'nerts' to myself and laugh it off. Because I know that nothing a chatter writer can say about the marriage can change it.

"Denials in Hollywood are never believed, anyway. The only way to combat unfair gossip is to ignore it."

Barbara doesn't mind having her name and age printed, and her life as far as it affects her career is public. But her own life—"that's private," she maintains.

Gordon Second Frohman

Max Gordon, the outstanding, but practically unknown New York theatrical producer, with four smash hits to his credit this season, is just another of New York's East Side boys, who made good on Broadway, according to O. O. McIntyre. The Broadway columnist tells in the June Cosmopilitan, some interesting personal facts about this second Frohman, on whose shoulders he believes has fallen the mantles of such geninses of the theater as Belasco and Ziegfeld.

"He is the least showy of all the trumpeting Titans who have made New York the capital of the theatrical world," McIntyre says. "He has a higgledy-piggedly office in the New Amsterdam, an old roll desk, on top of which is but one article, a silver-framed picture of his brother Cliff, autographed: 'To My Kid Brother. Mit Luff!'

"Among his most pronounced handicaps is a chronic hypochondria and fear of being alone. Every once in a while he vanishes, and his associates know he is in a hospital undergoing innumerable tests, only to find he is in perfect health.

"Wherever he goes, someone is with him. If he wants to drop down to the corner he carefully jockeys some attache or friend into going along.

"Gordon has been married for 12 years and and is deeply devoted to his wife, once a shining member of one of his vaudeville skits. Yet during all these years, save when out of town, he has eaten two breakfasts, one with his wife and the other with his mother, now 80, traveling every morning from Sixty-fourth street to One Hundred and Forty-second."

At present his Broadway hits are the dramatization of Sinclair Lewis' novel, "Dodsworth;" the all-English importation, "The Shining Hour;" "Roberta" and "Her Moster's voice." He has also produced "Three's a Crowd," "Flying Colors," "The Cat and the Fiddle" and Noel Coward's "Design for Living." He and Coward never signed a contract. A handshake was their agreement. Coward's next American play will be produced by Gordon.

No-Matrimony Pact Offered

RKO wants to sign Tom Brown to a five-year contract, but only if he agrees not to marry within this period. Tom is in a state of great uncertainty. Five years is a long time, especially as he and Anita Louise have been going together for months.

RKO contends that Tom, aged 20, is playing characters of from 18 to 22 years and that marriage would hurt him with the fans.

Tom is said to be inclined to rebel against the prohibition. Unless something happens to change his mind, he is likely to turn down the offer and free-lance.

'Men in White' Awarded Prize Although Jury Voted for 'Mary'

By GEORGE SEIBEL

There should be general satisfaction over the award of the Pulitzer Dramatic Prize to Sydney Kingsley's "Men In White," the very fine drama of American hospital life running all season on Broadway. Over six months ago I saw this play, and then said that if the prize were awarded to any other drama, the author of the other drama should be ashamed to take it and should turn it over to Kingsley. It seems odd that the three members of the Drama Jury—composed of Clayton Hamilton, Walter Prichard Eaton and Austin Strong—should have voted unanimously for Maxwell Anderson's "Mary of Scotland," produced by the Theater Guild. Their vote was overruled by the Advisory Board of the School of Journalism, who apparently decided unanimously that "Men In White' should get the prize.

Another illustration of the fallibility of critics and the unaccountability of taste or literary judgment. Although I do not know Author Kingsley and have sincere friendship and esteem for Maxwell Anderson, as well as for two of the three men on the jury, I cannot see how "Mary of Scotland" can be put above "Men in White." Anderson's historic drama is beautifully written, and that may have blinded many to the fact that it is not, strictly speaking, drama at all. The excellence of the acting by Helen Hayes and Philip Merivale also may have had something to do with it. It's a good thing there are superior courts in some prize contests, as well as juries, which in the Pulitzer awards serve only as advisory committees.

Mr. Seibel.

EFFIE SHANNON TALKS

The controversy over clean plays in New York City has turned into a debate between License Commissioner Paul Moss, who wants to purge the New York stage, and Effie Shannon, the once popular favorite of Frohman's Lyceum Stock Company.

It was at a testimonial dinner to Daniel Frohman. Testimonial dinners to Daniel are now so frequent that he's threatened with indigestion. This one was attended by about 1,000 young men and women, and gave Commissioner Moss an opportunity to express his views. He is doing good work in deodorizing filthy burlesque, but there are people who would like to see him go after some of the new dramas.

Effie Shannon, who made her great hit with Herbert Kelcey in "The Moth and the Flame," followed Moss as a speaker and said she believed "the gentle refined ladylike type of drawing room comedies have had their day. I believe in realistic drama. No one has ever been driven to crime or immorality by hearing some actor pronounce certain words."

Moss might have answered that some actors and some playwrights seem to write their plays around certain words. Still it does not follow that any man or woman is endowed with enough wisdom and sense to qualify as a censor of literature or the drama.

CONVERTED BY JULIET

As for the moral influence of the drama, score one for William Shakespeare and Katharine Cornell. She has been playing "Romeo and Juliet" alternately with "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," and recently she received a letter from a school girl in Ohio, enclosing a dollar with this explanation:

"After the matinee of 'Romeo and Juliet,' I wanted so much to see you act again that I did a very dishonest thing. After everyone else had left the gallery and the lights had been turned off, I came back and hid under a seat. When all the ushers had left, I climbed up and waited until the evening play began. When the audience came I got among them and went to a seat without being noticed by the ticket taker. While the play was going on I was very glad I had stayed, but afterward my conscience, prompted a little by my mother and teacher, began working, and I felt thoroughly ashamed. I felt worse about cheating one of the outstanding representatives of the theater I love than if I had robbed a bank, and the only way I could restore my self-respect was to send the money to you and apologize sincerely for what I did.

"P. S.—I omitted the government taxes. As for the dollar, I wish you would give it to the Actors' Fund."

Here is evidence that Shakespeare is an influence for good. But we may expect the Department of Justice to get on the trail, and discover who this girl was, so they can collect the amusement tax which she did not remit.

Troubles No Back Row For Busby

Norma Shearer plays a gay girl who gets into much trouble through one good-time escapade in "Riptide," next picture in the Sheridan Square.

There's no back row in a Busby Berkeley chorus. In fact there are no rows at all. Every girl has to be camera proof in looks and ability for the simple reason that they are to be revealed individually before the camera in each number. Berkeley, creator of the numbers for "42nd Street," "Footlight Parade," "Gold Diggers," "Wonder Bar" and now "Dames," has an antipathy for "rows" and won't have 'em.

Berkeley uses circles, pyramids, rectangles, rainbows and any other geometric or futuristic figure that comes to his mind. His girls are never just a "chorus." Every girl is an integral part in the general effect he gets. Every girl is a "key" girl and for practical purposes they are all in the center.

It is said that he interviewed as many as a thousand girls a day while casting the "Don't Say Goodnight" number in "Wonder Bar." And he kept it up 12 days before making final selections.

"I see thousands who would do nicely for the back row of any stage chorus," Berkeley said. "But that doesn't help any. Every girl has to stand alone."

Berkeley never under any circumstances asks applicants the question, "Can you dance?" He asks them if they can swim, dive, sing, wink, roller skate—or cook. He really doesn't want to know about their culinary accomplishments but he does want to see how they react to such a question. It means a lot, he says.

Actress

Jane Francey plays the role of a motion picture actress in "Love Is Not Important," comedy by Rosemary Casey, to be given in the Nixon Friday and Saturday by the Bacchanalians of Tech. Miss Francey, Cleveland girl, is a drama department sophomore at Tech.

Oland Is Owner Of 7,000 Acres

Warner Oland, the sauve Charlie Chan of the talkies, owns 7,000 acres, including 15 miles of ocean front, on the island, Palmettos de la Virgin, off the coast of Mexico. The actor bought the land 16 years ago with the idea of eventually building a home there. Now he can reach his estate in eight flying hours. His latest plan is to turn it into a cattle ranch.

On Lincoln Plane In One Way

On a tour of the Fox lot in Hollywood Irvin Cobb met Director Harry Lachman, who professed admiration for his work. Cobb made the smiling reply:

"The same general thing applies to my writings as to Lincoln's Gettysburg address. They are both good literature but they lack sex appeal."

Irvin Cobb's Daughter Finds Hollywood Astounding

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, May 10.—Hello! Oh, a traitor to New York! Elisabeth (can I help it if she wants to spell it that way?) Cobb, Irvin's also-literary daughter, has some cracks about cinemaland that might prove interesting—at least, I hope so, and to quote Lizz (pardon the informality)—

"I'm just beginning to understand why the natives here say that if you live in Hollywood a month you never want to return to New York.

"Things happen here so fast and with such an imaginative sweep that one is literally astounded. It is worth the trip alone just to hear that Will Rogers has actually memorized Eugene O'Neill's original lines for his stage appearance of 'Ah' Wilderness.' It's positively the first time he has not supplied his own dialogue for any show.

"And pictures! Every one in Hollywood lives, breathes, eats and plays bridge with pictures, stories, parts, actors, directors, etc., etc. It's all you hear morning, noon and night.

"For instance, at any social gathering, in any home, it isn't unusual to listen to, 'one diamond . . . Fox has borrowed Robert Young from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; two hearts . . . The flying-nip-ups have just had their option renewed; three diamonds . . . If they had put the chase in the fourth reel of the end, it would have cleaned up; three spades . . . give 'em sex stuff and you got a hit; double three spades and that last crack,' and so on and so on.

"To me Hollywood is better than a three-ring circus. I'd certainly like to stay, but I can't be away from my two children the length of time it takes to write a good scenario. And then there's my husband, Alton Brody, who has his business in New York—he requires some attention!"

You can take it from me—Elisabeth Cobb will be back, especially since Papa Irvin has consented to turn movie actor for eight Al Roach short comedies.

* * *

Odds and Ends from Filmdom's Boulevards . . . Alice Faye's promised not to make any stage appearences without Rudy Vallee. Now isn't that cute? . . . Grady Sutton, a SWISH of a comedian, and Joyce Compton are trying to make it a romance . . . Charles Judels has been in Hollywood almost two weeks, and still hasn't played a benefit. He's beginning to think he's a flop! . . . Tommy Dugan has about made up his mind to return to Broadway, so he can get a job in the movies. It's being done that way now, you know.

While strolling through a major studio the other day I noticed a tall, stately girl . . . I seemed to remember her from somewhere. She passed and nodded. Oh, yes—she was once the reigning social deb of Los Angeles.

I questioned an assistant director. The girl, since the family fortunes had been swept away in that—er—let us say, crash, had been doing extra work in the movies. Finally, she landed a stock job—at the trifling sum of $35 a week.

But that isn't all. There is another story—this girl was (and is) a great lover of horses. She had, at the height of her social career, one of the finest mares in the country.

As things grew worse for the family's bank account, her father said he would have to sell the mare. He couldn't afford the feed bill. The girl refused. She said she would starve herself first.

Borrowing a hundred dollars from a friend, she paid the longowed bill, and then started on a tour of the various horse shows. The mare copped all the prizes, paid all expenses for the girl and a groom—and ended up making enough extra in hay cash for two more seasons!

The ex-heiress is one plucky little lady. More power to her—and hay to the mare!

* * *

Kinema Knicknacks — Santa Claus will probably appear a bit early with the stork for the Mort Downeys (Barbara Bennett) . . . Lilian Ellis, Danish warbler in the Parisian Moulin Rouge, is a-heading for cinema work in Hollywood under the Hal Roach comedy banner . . . Since MGM figures vaudeville is dead (how did anybody discover that?) the locale for the remake of "Excess Baggage" will be switched to a radio station. But, tell me, how are they going to do the slide-for-life routine?

* * *

Pages from Sportdom's Past—Looking over a list of old-time prizefighters, wrestlers and others from the world of sports, I found that Hollywood is keeping some of them busy.

Among the former ring stars doing flicker work are Victor McLaglen, Victory Jory, Frank Moran, Frank Hagney and Edgar Kennedy. Others in the "bit and extra" class are Joe Herrick, Jimmy Dime, Tom Kennedy, Jimmy Dundee, Phil Bloom, Frankie Dolan, Bert Keyes, Charlie Sullivan and Harry Tenbrooke.

All In A Day

By MARK HELLINGER

Josephine Green

(Based on a suggestion by W. J. Perkin, of Baltimore.)

IT WAS 7:20 a. m. The alarm rang loudly. The woman twisted in her bed and aimed a sleepy poke at the jigger that controlled the ball. The poke was successful and the noise stopped.

Slowly with a yawn, the woman stepped from her bed and switched on the light. Natural light didn't hit that room until the afternoon. She saw it only on Sundays.

In the small bathroom, she dropped her nightgown and gazed into the mirror on the medicine cabinet. What she could see of herself was far from exciting; what she couldn't, wasn't exciting either.

Her eyes were puffy, and her brown hair had plenty of gray in it. Her nose was large, and you would hardly describe those bled a pretzel that had been cracked lips as being of the kissable variety. Her figure resembunked in beer. In other words, she wouldn't have stood much of a chance in a beauty contest.

She did not fuss with her dressing. There were four dresses in the closet, and it would have required a detective to note the differences in them. She chose one blindly, completed her dressing, snapped off the light and went downstairs to the street.

It was shortly before 8 o'clock, and the big cafeteria on the corner was crowded. She bought a paper from the boy on the corner and entered the restaurant. Finally finding an empty table, she sat down to her morning meal of grapefruit, rolls and coffee.

The paper was dull that morning. There was much about the economic situation in Washington and more about the Japanese threat. These things did not interest her. There was an interesting sex story on page three, but she had only read the first two paragraphs when she saw a man with the same paper spread before him regarding her curiously. So she folded the paper hurriedly, paid her check and left.

In the subway, she was neither young nor good-looking enough to find a seat. It was only a 20-minute ride, but she was jostled and pushed around until she felt that she could stand it no longer. She did not have to glare at any man in outraged virtue—but that was more of a hurt than a help.

Before 9, she was seated at her desk in the credit department of the wholesale house for which she worked. Most of the other women usually foregathered in the washroom for a last smoke and a bit of gossip. But she never joined them. The gossip about boy friends and dates didn't interest her—and the one cigaret she had attempted some years before had made her ill.

There was a large pile of orders waiting for credit approvals. She counsulted her files, checked, rechecked and double checked. She bent over her cards and her slips, and handled each one as though it were the most important of state documents.

Precisely at noon, she left the office and went to a little tea room where the chairs and tables were as fragile as the sandwiches. Cream cheese on gluten bread was her selection, and that was followed by an alligator-pear salad and some tea.

She took her time eating, and then walked slowly back to the office. In earlier days—much earlier—she had enjoyed these lunch hours. She had mingled with the other girls, and they had talked of many things. But all of her old companions had been married and replaced by other workers. And these new women did not interest her.

In the office, the afternoon was more or less a repetition of the morning. Shortly after 4, the orders thinned out. And at 5 o'clock, she was free to go.

She strolled over to Fifth avenue, it was beautiful out, and a seat atop a bus was much more attractive than the crowded subway. She had to wait a long time on a long line, but she didn't mind. Her dinner appointment with Mrs. Scrunch was not until 6:30, which would give her many minutes to spare.

Shortly before 6, she found a seat to her liking. The bus lumbered up Fifth avenue and turned west on Fifty-seventh street. She saw the same windows, the same houses, the same crowds. Directly in front of her, a boy and girl began to neck. She blushed. And as soon as she was able, she changed her seat.

Dinner with Mrs. Scrunch was a weekly event, and it was always very dull. Mrs. Scrunch was a widow of her own age who had a passion for music, although she knew nothing whatsoever about it. They always dined in the same little uptown restaurant, and Mrs. Scrunch always said the same things.

This night, after they had dined, Mrs. Scrunch suggested a neighborhood movie. Our heroine agreed. They walked to the theater, and they had to sit across the aisle from each other because the place was crowded. Mrs. Scrunch complained, but the other woman didn't mind.

She relaxed in her seat and watched the feature. It was a tender story of a great love, and the handsome hero almost lost his beloved several times before it all came out beautifully in the end. When it was over, she said good night to Mrs. Scrunch in front of the theater, and hurried in the direction of her home.

She hurried because she had heard several stories of girls being annoyed in this vicinity of late. The landlady had told her about it in hushed tones and advised her to be careful. Rounding the corner of her block, her heart leaped when she saw four men standing together. She passed them rapidly, her head high. The four men turned away.

She entered her little apartment, hung up her coat and hat, and locked the door carefully. She sat on her bed and looked about the room. Then, suddenly, she began to cry—and cry—and cry!

Who wouldn't? . . .

Dix Remembered On Last Day

Richard Dix's last day at the RKO studio found his dressing room was filled with parting gifts. Executives, stars, property men friends of his six years' stay on the lot, went to visit him on the set. His last picture work there was in "The Family Man," and the final lines he had to speak were:

"I have a thousand things to do; a thousand places to go. You see, I lost so much time. I have to make up for those years."

In a recent issue of an astrological journal, Holmes analyzed the zodiacal influences governing the various studios. The memorial fund now totals $7,000, including a $1,000 bond given by Dr. George W. Gerwig in memory of his son, killed in the service. Profits from senior plays and the Wah Hoo, school year book, have built up the remainder.

The income is used to help worthy students of Allegheny attain a college education and to aid needy students who otherwise would not be able to finish their high school course.

Studio Invaded By Thief

A clarinet, a machine gun and a coat were stolen from the set of "Down to Their Last Yacht," a picture now being completed at the RKO studio. The thief operated while the company was working. Sidney Blackmer discovered the first loss when he went to get his coat for a scene. It couldn't be found, so the annoyed actor had to get a different outfit and retake some scenes in which he had worn the missing garment.

One of the musicians lost the clarinet, and the property department is minus the machine gun. Weapons of this sort are kept in studio safes and are regularly checked by local authorities. Blackmer's coat was found later on a deserted stage.

Wages and Jobs in Pennsylvania

Shall They Be Destroyed By Our Government For Uncertain Benefits To Southern And Western Agriculture?

Primarily, American purchasing power comes from American wages paid to American workers by American productive enterprises. This is especially true in our own State, whose whole business structure is based upon our diversified industries. The Democratic Administration acknowledged the truth of this principle in the fundamental purposes of N. R. A.

But with appalling inconsistency the Administration now ignores that same truth by attempting to take industrial employment away from Pennsylvania and similar States, and TRANSFER IT TO FOREIGN MILLS AND FACTORIES, in the hope that "in time" this increase of FOREIGN PURCHASING POWER will create larger foreign demand for the cotton, wheat, etc., of our southern and western farmers.

It may be difficult to believe that a Government which has required all industries to shorten hours and increase wages in order to create more employment and greater purchasing power, could follow that up with efforts to destroy some of those same industries and thus add thousands to the ranks of the unemployed.

Yet that is precisely what is being attempted—an attempt that is being fought in the United States Senate right now under the able leadership of Senator David A. Reed.

Ditching American Labor

The proposal before Congress provides that the Executive be empowered to make reciprocal trade agreements with foreign countries, without the advice or consent of Congress, and, as a part of such agreements, to lower existing tariff duties by as much as 50%.

Obviously, and as the Administration has clearly stated, the purpose of this power would be to lower duties on certain products to a point where the American industry would lose its American market and be forced out of business. The American industry would be destroyed, in order to give that work to foreign mills and factories. The work and wages would be taken from American employees and given to the employees of a similar industry in some foreign country.

The idea behind this destructive proposal is, that in the lines selected, only foreign products would be available in the United States, and the American money thus diverted to the payment of FOREIGN WAGES might "in time" result in larger foreign demand for our surplus cotton, wheat, etc.

It is fitting and consistent that Senator Reed should be leading this battle. For if this plan should be put in operation, Pennsylvania would be one of the first States to feel its consequences. And the wholly unwarranted punishment of those who would be robbed of jobs would be reflected and passed on in further injuries to merchants, farmers and other groups.

Yet, Senator Reed's principal opponent for the Republican nomination for United States Senator in the Primary on May 15th, would be supporting this proposal if he were in the Senate now. For he has said repeatedly that if nominated by Republicans, and elected by Republicans, he would support ALL the policies of the Democratic Administration.

The point for Pennsylvanians to consider—and especially for Pennsylvania labor to consider—is this:

MEMBERS OF THE CABINET and other HIGH OFFICIALS OF THE GOVERNMENT have stated frankly that industries which are now supplying big payrolls and large employment in Pennsylvania are slated for the junk-pile if this proposal is adopted and carried into effect.

The Lace Industry Has Been Specifically Listed

There are lace mills in Philadelphia, Chester, Columbia, Wilkes-Barre, Scranton and other points throughout the State. They employ, even in these times, upward of 10,000 persons, with a weekly payroll of well above $100,000.

This is characterized as an "unessential" industry, and "not indigenous to our soil." Yet all of these plants have furnished employment over long periods of time. In Wilkes-Barre, for instance, one mill has been in operation for 50 years; another for 43 years.

But the lace mills of Pennsylvania are not the only ones on this program of destruction. Others are already on the list. And beyond that, this proposal would create a power of life and death over every industry and over the jobs of all industrial workers, and all industry and all labor would be in constant jeopardy.

The American Federation of Labor Is Bitterly Fighting This Proposal

Senator David A. Reed Is Leading That Battle In The U. S. Senate

This is the kind of intelligent, courageous and constructive service that Senator Reed has been giving the people of Pennsylvania for 12 years.

In the Primary, on May 15th, Senator Reed will be a candidate for the Republican nomination to succeed himself. We urge you to vote for Senator Reed and thereby help Pennsylvania to retain the advantage our people have in his ability, experience, seniority and position of leadership in the United States Senate.

SCHNADER ASSAILED IN COLLAPSE OF INSURANCE COMPANY

CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR BALKED AT AUDIT, BOND EXCHANGE TOLD

Pittsburgh officers and directors of the surety company.

PRINCIPALS TELL PARTS

It presents the results in the following exclusive statements by the principals involved and by those officials and experts familiar with the history of the company:

The Insurance Department in January, 1930, recommended that the Pennsylvania Surety Corporation be liquidated, but the Attorney General's department, of which Schnader was first deputy, granted the company a continuation.

Attorney John G. Frazer, of Pittsburgh, presented the company's request for the extension to permit it to attempt to save itself from collapse.

The extension of time was granted by the Attorney General's office without the consent of the Insurance Department. Commissioner Taggart told the Sun-Telegraph in a long distance telephone interview from his Northumberland home.

RECALLS HEARING

Taggart said:

"There was a hearing in the Attorney General's office.

"I don't recall who was there, but I do know that the Insurance Department was not a party to the extension of time for the surety company, because, if our department had been satisfied as to the financial status of the company, there would have been no hearing."

Attorney Frazer explained:

"I understood that some of the directors of the surety company believed they could save the concern by getting some new money on some real estate investments they had in the South. We asked for the extension of time on that ground."

BALKED AT AUDIT

However, the company became insolvent the following year and the Insurance Department became its liquidator.

It is a result of this liquidation that Attorney General Schnader's present candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor has been attacked by Attorney W. Clyde Grubbs, of Pittsburgh, with the charge that he blocked an independent audit of the company's affairs in 1931.

Grubbs was a former special counsel to the Insurance Department assigned by Gov. Pinchot to investigate the surety company.

He alleges that Schnader balked at an audit on the grounds it would cost too much, and advised him to proceed with a suit without the audit.

Grubbs avers:

"Main and Company would have made the audit for $5,000."

THREATENED TO RESIGN

In a letter to Pinchot, Grubbs threatened to resign his post if the audit were not authorized. According to Grubbs:

"The Governor replied that he agreed with me on the audit, but that if he went over Schnader's head, it might mean Schnader's resignation."

Schnader, in Pittsburgh this week, said:

"I told Grubbs to bring the suit and find out what the defendant's answer was to see what he would have to look for in an audit.

"I simply sustained Insurance Commissioner Armstrong's objection to spending $5,000, which was one-third of the assets of the defunct surety company, for an audit when we didn't know what we wanted to find.

"That was my only connection with the case. Grubbs tried to go over my head, but the Governor sustained me.

"About a month ago Grubbs wrote me a letter requesting permission to represent some of the defendants in the present suit. I gave it to him."

SURPRISE STATEMENT

Grubbs replied to the Schnader statement today with this explanation:

"Two of the defendant directors came to me and asked me to be their counsel. I wrote the letter to Schnader, but later decided not to get mixed up in the case. I am not going to defend anybody."

A fallacy in Schnader's proposal to bring suit against the surety company before an audit was made, according to Grubbs, was proved when he filed a statement of claim to collect a $50,000 note held as an asset by the surety company from E. M. Love, one of its directors.

In his answer to the statement, Love surprised Grubbs by claiming the company owed him $575,000, which he had put up for the purchase of securities acquired from the First National Company.

BONDS SOLD TO PUBLIC

After Grubbs resigned in 1931, no action was taken against the surety company heads until last month.

The present suit alleges negligence on the part of the company's directors in purchasing certain securities of the First National Company.

The First National Company was engaged in the general real estate and mortgage business and sold to the public thousands of dollars' worth of its bonds, many of which were guaranteed by the Pennsylvania Surety Corporation following its creation in 1928.

The labyrinth of finance in which the surety company was eventually lost and by which the First National obtained a substantial interest in the surety firm touched at least six banks, according to court records on file in Baltimore.

Under the organization plan of the Pennsylvania Surety Corporation, by which it was to guarantee a substantial amount of First National Company bonds, the First National was to provide $750,000 cash capital, to be matched by the Pittsburgh group.

INVOLVED EXCHANGES

But three bondholders' suits later brought by Baltimore creditors of the First National Company against the Baltimore Trust Company, as trustee of the bonds, charged:

"By a series of involved and circuitous exchanges and interchanges of checks, and transfers and retransfers of credits, and juggling of accounts between the said parties, payment of said subscription (the $750,000 by the First National) was made in the semblance and form of cash, but, in fact and in reality, said surety company did not receive, nor did the First National Company pay, any actual cash whatever for said stock."

On April 23, 1928, the First National Company borrowed $300,000 from the Baltimore Trust Company on its promissory note and gave as collateral 8,000 shares of capital stock in the Pennsylvania Surety Corporation, according to the bill of complaint filed in Baltimore.

This loan was then converted into a certificate of deposit in favor of the surety company, the bill alleges.

By a similar method, certificates of deposit were created to the credit of the surety company with the following banks and in the following amounts:

The Century Trust Company of Baltimore, $200,000; National Park Bank of New York, $100,000; Engineers National Bank of Cleveland, $50,000; Tarentum Savings and Trust Company of Pennsylvania, $25,000, and the Third National Bank of Pittsburgh, $25,000.

The First National Company then sold approximately $600,000 worth of its securities to the surety company, according to the bill of complaint.

The Pennsylvania Surety Corporation is alleged to have paid for $400,000 of these securities by its checks for $200,000 to the order of the First National Company drawn upon each, the Baltimore Trust Company and the Century Trust Company.

SECURITIES QUESTIONED

The trust companies were then told to charge the amount of the checks against the certificates of deposit issued for the First National Company.

In the case of the Baltimore Trust Company, the First National Company immediately delivered over its $200,000 check, the proceeds to be applied to the payment of the $300,000 loan.

As a result of this procedure, the bill charges:

"Four hundred thousand dollars of the total amount of the $750,000 which the First National Company had so borrowed and caused to be converted to the use of said surety corporation . . . was returned by the surety corporation to the First National Company before said certificates of deposit or any of them had become available in cash."

The suits against the Baltimore Trust Company alleged three issues of bonds of the First National Company were secured by worthless collateral described as Florida real estate.

SETTLED OUT OF COURT

Total amount involved in the three suits was $2,061,100. The case was settled outside of court on the second day of the trial, on August 11, 1931.

Another strange manipulation of securities was brought to light later when Schnader refused Grubbs an audit in 1931.

Then the Pittsburgh attorney is understood to have reminded him that the state permitted the surety company to transfer some questionable First National securities for $300,000 in government bonds deposited with the state to protect claims of policy holders.

Grubbs alleges:

"About six months after the surety company was organized, there was a change of these securities.

"One hundred thousand dollars in so-called A-1 certificates of the First National Company, $25,000 Pittsburgh Hotel stock, $130,000 of Inter-Ocean Oil bonds and $100,000 of government bonds.

"After another six months, another $100,000 A-1 First National Company note was substituted for the other $100,000 government bonds."

TURNED OVER BONDS

Despite Commissioner Taggart's assertion that he knew nothing about this transfer, William Johnston, of 5016 Liberty avenue, for 32 years chief of the corporation division of the Insurance Department, told the Sun-Telegraph:

"Ray Latshaw, a former employe of the Insurance Department who had resigned to become vice president of the surety company, and Joe Ward, president of the company, went to Taggart's office one day.

"Latshaw later came out and went over to my office with the First National securities.

"He said the company had sold the government bonds and Taggart had given him permission temporarily to transfer the securities until they could be replaced with authorized securities.

"I told Ray I didn't think they were securities we should have.

"I tried to see Taggart, but he was busy in his office. So I telephoned West & Co., stock brokers, to check the securities.

"They told me the securities were guaranteed by the Metropolitan Casualty Company, of New York.

"I gave Latshaw the government bonds."

ACTED AS MESSENGER

Taggart, informed of Johnston's statement, declared:

"Those people were down there so many times, I can't recall any such conference. It was all a matter of routine, and Johnston had full responsibility in his department."

Another version of the transfer, or transfers, was given the Sun-Telegraph by R. E. Latshaw, the Ray referred to by Johnston:

"I don't recall any such conference, but I did act as a messenger exchanging the securities.

"I understood that the arrangement had been made between Joe Ward and Taggart, but my only contact was with Johnston. I exchanged securities for $100,000 in government bonds each of three times."

'NEEDED MONEY'

Still another version was told by J. W. Ward, a former vice president of the Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., who became president of the Pennsylvania Surety Corporation. Ward said:

"One of our officials, I can't say whether it was myself or not, got permission from the Insurance Department to make the exchange in securities.

"Johnston had an opportunity to examine the securities before accepting them for the transfer.

"At the time, we knew, such real estate securities were not particularly marketable, but thought these securities would serve the purpose as well as the government bonds.

"And we needed the money."

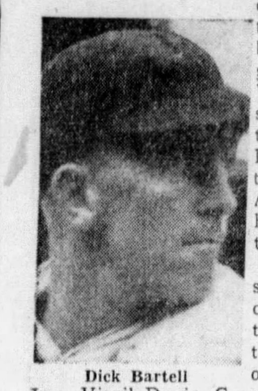
JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Phils Teach Pep Lesson. Trailers Outhustle Bucs. Holdouts Keep In Shape.

Estimates On Warneke. Strain of Holding Lead. Loughran Not to Quit.

In their first Pittsburgh appearance of the season, the lowly Phils did more than crack the winning streak of the Pirates and flash a surprisingly good new pitcher in Curt Davis, drafted from San Francisco, who throttled the Buccaneer attack and halted the batting drive of Gus Suhr at 17 straight games, though not stopping Paul Waner from running a string of the same nature to 16. One other thing that the Quakers did, under the gingerly leadership of Dick Bartell, was to teach the Rovers a lesson in pepper and hustle. A stranger dropping in probably would have made the wrong guess as to which team was fighting for first place.



Dick Bartell

The contrast between the clubs in spirit was all the more striking in view of the different conditions under which they were operating. Within a year, the Phils had been riddled by the sale of Chuck Klein, Pinky Whitney, Hal Lee, Virgil Davis, George Davis and Ray Benge. They had lost more games than any other team in either league except the Reds and were floundering around in the discouraging environment of seventh place. Hardly a situation to inspire fight.

The Pirates, on the other hand, were riding on the crest of a winning wave, had won five games in a row, and eight out of 10, were only half a game behind the leaders, and were supposed to be fighting for first place, where a victory would have landed them. In short, the Corsairs had everything to spur them on while the Phils had nothing, yet from start to finish the seventh-placers showed a great deal more life, pepper and get-there spirit than the club that was facing a chance to take the lead in the pennant race. The Bucs can help their own cause no little by taking a leaf out of the book of the noisy Bartell and his mates.

HOLDOUTS KEEP FIT AMONG SEMI-PROS

Pitcher Wesley Ferrell, of the Indians, and Catcher Cliff Bolton, of the Senators, who prolonged their holdouts this year until they were placed on organized baseball's suspended list, are playing semi-pro ball to keep themselves in shape on the chance that they may eventually come to terms with their respective clubs in the American League or be traded to other teams. Ferrell and Bolton form the battery for Thomasville, N. C., in the independent Carolina Textile League. In their latest game they lost to Albemarle, 3 to 2, in 10 innings, despite the fact that Ferrell struck out 14 men.

The possibility that Ferrell will be purchased from Cleveland by the White Sox, if the Red Sox do not succeed in getting him in the meantime, is strengthened by reports that Owner Louis Comiskey is going out for new material in a plan to give the Chicago American League club a shaking up. Comiskey was so dissatisfied with the work under Fonseca that he openly accused some of the players of soldiering, and he threatens to make drastic changes if the men do not show a much better spirit under the new pilot, Jimmy Dykes, a smart, hustling playing manager who is well-equipped to make a success of his reign if he gets the right sort of co-operation.

SLAB FOES SEE BIG YEAR FOR WARNEKE

The fact that Lonnie Warneke lost his grip and skidded after the Pirates interrupted his early winning streak of three straight has not lessened the respect that rival pitchers have for the Cub ace nor shaken their belief that he is going to have a big season. A discussion of Warneke among the Brave hurlers brought from Bob Smith the prediction that Lonnie will win 22 games this year. Smith pronounces Charley Grimm's star not only a great pitcher, but a fine ball player, who can hit, run and field.

Lonnie Warneke

Huck Betts says he agrees with Smith that Warneke is a great pitcher, but disagrees with him on the prediction that Lonnie will win 22 games. Huck thinks he will win as many as 25. Betts recalls that Warneke lost some close and well-pitched games last season because of lack of batting support, but points out that the Cubs have a stronger attack this year and will make more runs for all their hurlers, meaning that

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

While the lowly Phil complex seemed to be upon our ambitious Pirates today it would be ill-timed to state that there was anything "phony" to the Quaker success of yesterday, in view of the performance of a pitcher who has dedeserved to be in the big show for the past two seasons.

Curtis Davis' victory over the Buccos as he snapped their streak at five games was as clean as the all-around play of Dick Bartell, whose punch inspired more than enough tallies to insure the decision. To speak the real truth, Davis really deserved a shutout triumph over the Pittsburghers. The score was 6 to 2.

PRICE TOO HIGH

Davis pitched such remarkable ball for the San Francisco Seals a couple of years back he was in demand but when the major-league owners sent their agents to the Golden Gate City they soon learned that the Seals' directors were not aware the panic was on. In other words they sought a big fortune in return for Curt's services. Davis was the immediate sufferer, for he had to stay in the Coast League.

When the Pirates were in San Francisco one year ago, Manager Jimmy Caveney, of the Seals, told this writer that Davis could be purchased for a nominal sum—presumably $10,000. But still nobody would gobble up the tall fellow, who looked like a Warneke as he slew the Pirates. The Phils eventually put in a draft for Davis and through this channel, the big fellow made his way to the majors.

YOUNG SCORES TWO

Pep Young's handle hit with two out and two on in the seventh was all that saved the Pirates from a shutout defeat at the hands of the Phillies in the initial frolic of the four-game series. Pep's lazy fly to left could not be handled by any Quaker and Thevenow and Padden scored.

Red Lucas was touched for 11 hits as he suffered his first defeat as a Pirate.

Bartell, with four hits and another drive that sent Lindstrom to the fence, was a star in every way. Dick played a big part in all four of the Phils' scoring rounds and his fielding was sensational. Among other things, Bartell snapped Gus Suhr's batting streak. The former Pirate shortstop made a whirlwind play on an easy roller that flagged Gus. Suhr had hit safely in 17 games.

The Buccos have played their last two games with three stars on the hospital list. Pie Traynor is still nursing a sore arm; Lloyd Waner has not recovered from his cold, and Harry Lavagetto had to leave the linup with a lame back.

Earl Grace suffered a split finger yesterday and had to leave the lineup. Gibson is so sorely pressed he may ask Traynor and Lloyd Waner to get back on the job in a hurry. Lavagetto should be ready in the course of a few days.

Intercollegiate Golf Dates Set

Pitt today selected June 11, 12 and 13 as the dates for its annual intercollegiate golf tournament, to be played at the St. Clair Country Club. Carnegie Tech, Duquesne, W. & J., West Virginia, Pitt, Temple and Western Reserve have entered teams in the event,

TECH RIFLISTS HONORED AT REVIEW

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Carnegie Tech's regiment of R. O. T. C. men and the famous Skibo Band put on one of their fanciest shows on the campus "cut" shortly before noon today as they paraded in review before Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Adelbert Cronkhite and Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of the school, as a feature of the ceremonies marking the presentation of the large silver team plaque and gold medals to the members of the Tartan rifle team which won the Eastern senior championship in the annual William Randolph Hearst rifle shoot.

Maj. Gen. Cronkhite, wartime commander of the 80th Division, personally pinned the gold medals upon the breasts of the individual members of the team, who came to front and center before the reviewing line, which included Gen. and Mrs. Cronkhite, Dr. Baker, Capt. A. S. Ackerman, commander of the Carnegie R. O. T. C. unit, and the writer, representing the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Then he presented the plaque, the finest the school has won in the number of years it has been competing in the Hearst competition, to Dr. Baker and Capt. Ackerman. Also participating in the ceremony were Lieut. A. H. Burton and Sergt. R. S. Sommer, coach of the rifle team.

REGIMENT PARADES

Fully 350 members of the R. O. T. C. were in the regiment which paraded before the famous general who commanded so many Pittsburghers in the World War. Following the exercises, Gen. and Mrs. Cronkhite were guests of Dr. Baker at luncheon at the P. A. A.

Carnegie Tech has made a fine record in the Hearst shoots. Its team always is up among the leaders and last year one of its members, Helmut Buse, tied for the national individual title.

The annual Hearst shoot was instituted in 1921 to foster military preparedness in the high schools and has grown with each succeeding year. It was extended to colleges and universities and military schools and the scoring is a part of the official War Department records. Five hundred and one teams competed in the fourteenth tournament this year.

The personnel of the Carnegie team, which had a team score of 947 and high individual score of 195, is:

Charles W. Merriman, Penrose S. Mellinger, John Singel, Herman E. Miller and D. Ewing Irons.

CASHIATTA, BEATEN, STAR OF RING TOURNEY

GOLDEN GLOVES TITLE EVENT CONCLUDED

By JESS CARVER

He didn't win the title, even though the majority of those who watched his work thought he deserved it, but sturdy Felix Cashiatti, of the Pittsburgh Lyceum stood out as the most promising of all the 100-odd amateur boxers who participated in the annual golden gloves tournament, sponsored by the Islam Grotto which came to a close in the Grotto's fine auditorium last night.

FANS BOO DECISION

For four bouts after Cashiatta lost to Frankie Wingo, of the Willow Club, in the 118-pound final, the crowd of approximately 1,000 booed and booed and booed. Then they booed some more. It was a close, hard-fought bout, with Wingo piling up an advantage in the first round and the first half of the second and Cashiatta staging a brilliant rally to carry the latter part of the second and all of the third. At the conclusion the judges disagreed, Judge Harry Neiman voting for Wingo and Judge Friedman for Cashiatta, with Referee Red McDermott deciding in favor of the Willow Club veteran.

From this observation post it looked like Cashiatta deserved the edge, due to his heavier and more telling punching in the final round, but it was an easy one to call either way. Cashiatta demonstrated a pip of a left hand, jabbing and hooking with telling effect. The kid tabbed himself as a comer.

FIVE KNOCKOUTS

Twenty-eight battles were staged last night, with five knockouts resulting. Only one was recorded in the finals, Jimmy Clark, clever Oil City Negro welterweight, putting the kibosh on Joe Robinson, of Brownsville, in the final round. In his semi-final bout, Clark whipped one of the pre-tourney favorites when he banged out a decisive triumph over Charley Cravotta, former A. M. A. senior champion and a member of the last U. S. Olympic ring team.

Favorites emerged with the titles, Joey Sulk taking the 112-pound crown; Billy Miller the 126; Leo Sweeney the 135; Jimmy Clark the 147; John Gallo, of West Virginia, the 160; Henry Klena, Kittanning veteran, the light-heavyweight and Jimmy Jones the heavyweight.

The Willow Club won the team trophy by a narrow margin over the Pittsburgh Boys' Club. The summary:

MANCINI BOXES DUBLINSKY

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Jackie Brown vs. Val Angelman (for European flyweight title), 15 rounds, London.

Al Gainer vs. Lou Scozza, 10 rounds, New Haven.

Dominic Mancini, local lightweight, and Harry Dublinsky, of Chicago, have been signed to box the 10-round main bout at Hickey Park, Millvale, one week from next Monday night, it was announced today by Promoter-Matchmaker Bus Vogel.

The battle figures to be a tough test for Mancini, for Dublinsky, a seasoned boxer, has met many of the stars and beaten them handily. Mancini, however, is shooting for big game and is being given an opportunity to show how well he can handle himself against the topnotchers.

Solly Dukelsky, of Chicago, middleweight stablemate of Dublinsky, will meet an opponent to be named in the eight-round semi-final and there will be two six-round preliminaries.

BETWEEN ROUNDS

Tiger Joe Randall, of Clairton, fresh from two victories over Joey Bazzone, of McKeesport, wants to know why he isn't being given more of a tumble by the local promoters. He is willing to box any of the 147-50-pounders.

Latest news from Australia is to the effect that Joe Ghnouis, of St. Louis, upset the dope by beating Jimmy Kelso, the Australian lightweight champion, in a 15-round bout before a crowd of 12,000 at Sydney. Darby Blandon, of Australia, who recently defeated Speedy Dado there, has added Star Frisco to his list of victims in 15 rounds.

Al Quaill's injured knuckle on his right hand, battered in his bout with Andy Masky some six weeks ago, has mended and he is in training again and ready for bouts.

The Motor Square Garden show announced for next Monday night has been called off.

Star Milers to Clash At Princeton June 16

PRINCETON, N. J., May 10.—(AP.)—Protracted negotiations for an outdoor one-mile contest bringing together the great Glenn Cunningham and fleet Bill Bonthron, of Princeton, have been completed by the athletic authorities of Princeton.

America's greatest two milers, who divided two thrilling hairline decisions on indoor tracks last winter, will meet on the afternoon of Saturday, June 16, on the fast Tiger track in Palmer Stadium.

Provided conditions are favorable, it is the opinion of competent coaches, including Matty Geis, of Princeton, that either Bonthron or Cunningham, or both, have the stuff to do 4.06 or better for the distance.

CHISOX WALLOP SENATORS IN FIRST GAME UNDER DYKES

BRUINS REGAIN TOP POSITION IN NATIONAL

Associated Press.

Judging by the very first results, it appears possible that Jimmy Dykes, whose name seldom is mentioned without the adjective "peppery" being attached, is just what the doctor ordered for the Chicago White Sox.

The Chicago lineup has had a somewhat dangerous look all season, with such clouters as Al Simmons, Mule Haas, Luke Appling and the flashy rookie, Zeke Bonura, but it was not until the first game after Lew Fonseca was ousted and Dykes installed as manager that the Sox turned in a really high class performance. Then, with Simmons still on the sidelines, they broke out with a 13-hit attack on three Washington pitchers while the ancient Milt Gaston hurled three-hit ball and defeated the league champions, 8 to 1.

STILL IN CELLAR

The triumph didn't even come near to hoisting Chicago out of the league cellar as the St. Louis Browns, after losing five in a row, turned on the league leading Yankees and blasted out a 9 to 8 triumph with a five-run rally in the ninth.

Philadelphia and Boston, still tied, moved up a notch to make third place the subject of their argument as they defeated Cleveland and Detroit respectively. The A's had to go 10 innings for a 5 to 4 decision after O'Dell Hale had clouted two home runs for the Indians. The Red Sox won in regular time when Rookie Fritz Ostermueller turned in a great relief pitching job after taking the hill in the seventh with the bases loaded and none out.

Chicago's Cubs went back into the National League lead when they came through with a 10 to 9 victory over Brooklyn while St. Louis handed the Giants a 4 to 0 blanking. Dizzy Dean was responsible for New York's first whitewashing of the season.

BUCCOS STOPPED

Pittsburgh's five game winning streak came to a sudden end when young Curt Davis, of the Phillies, pitched his team to a 6 to 2 triumph.

The Boston Braves had a hitting field day at the expense of Cincinnati pitching, all of them but Pitcher Ed Brandt figuring in the 18 hit assault which brought a 10 to 3 victory.

Mellon's Stag II Wins at Berwyn

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—(AP.)—The Stag II, horse owned by Richard K. Mellon, of Pittsburgh, won the White Horse Plate yesterday at opening races of the Radnor Hunt Club in suburban Berwyn.

Black Feather, owned by Mrs. D. B. Wentz, Jr., was second.

Warneke will breeze through to victory in many games of the kind that resulted in defeats for him in 1933.

EASIER TO OVERCOME LEAD THAN HOLD IT

While the popular theory is that in almost any sort of sports competition it requires great courage to come from behind and battle your way to the front, Bobby Jones says that is not true of golf. He contends that it is easier to compete against a lead and overcome it than to hold a lead after once gaining it. The explanation is that a player leading by a fairly wide margin will play everything safe, whereas the player who is behind will take every chance, gamble on his shots. The danger in playing safe lies in a cramped and unnatural style. Being overcautious, the player unconsciously tightens and thereby misses shots. That's why so many golfers, with a championship apparently in their grasp, let it slip away.

The test of courage in golf is not so much in coming from behind, where the player must take chances, as in taking those chances when out in front. Walter Hagen shares the views of Jones. He, too, thinks it is much easier to come from behind. And no man in golf history has won more tournaments in that way than Hagen. In many of his important victories, Walter picked up strokes on third and fourth rounds by gambling with almost every shot, risking everything, and making some of the most amazing shots ever seen in major competition.

TWENTY YEARS IN RING LOUGHRAN'S AIM

Tommy Loughran repeatedly has been urged to give up boxing, particularly since his failure to win the victory he had been expected to score rather easily over Walter Neusel last week. Far from showing any inclination to follow the advice of his well-wishers, however, Loughran declares he means to go right on fighting. For no short period, either, but for nothing less than five years more.

Tommy Loughran

Twenty years in the ring is Loughran's goal. He has traveled three-quarters of that distance, and does not believe that the five still to go will be the hardest. Tommy scoffs at the theory that his failure to make a show of the awkward Neusel was due to his having lost speed and stamina by reason of the passing years and the mauling he took from Primo Carnera. He says he never was fresher after any bout in his long career than he was after the fight with Neusel, and that the only reason why he didn't beat the German all the distance was, not that he lacked any of his old speed or staying power, but that Walter boxed like an intoxicated windmill and it was impossible to figure out what he was going to do or to get any results by orthodox methods against his crude style.

REGATTA SPURS OAKMONT CLUB MEMBERS

Early interest in the staging of the William Randolph Hearst-Oakmont Boat Club outboard motorboating regatta, at Oakmont, Saturday and Sunday, July 14-15, is evidenced in the increased activity of the Boat Club members and additions to the club's membership.

No sooner was the regatta announced than the club began to receive applications for membership which promise to make it one of the biggest organizations of its kind in the country, attesting to the popularity of the movement to place the thrilling sport on a s und basis in this community. The applicants plan to buy boats of their own and go in for all of the sport the pastime affords.

Members of the committee arranging the details of the regatta are hard at work to leave no stone unturned to make the venture a huge success and already have made arrangements to speed the early working plans. A meeting of the entire committee will be held at the clubhouse within the next week to further plans.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Remember, huh? . . . How Broker's Tip beat out Head Play in the Kentucky Derby last year and then finished tenth in the Preakness a week later, when Head Play won, beating Ladysmith by four lengths? . . . Proving that you never can tell about hoss-racing . . . That the best horse of today is the bum of tomorrow.

Jack Zivic says that when he was boxing he was proud of his left hook, but since he's in politics and running for a seat in the Legislature he has found out that what counts most in this new business is a right cross after your name on the ballot sheet.

Mike Ray, the manager and second of boxers, who died of pneumonia the other day and was buried yesterday, was a swell guy who got a lot of bad breaks. . . . . Like all managers he always was living in the hope of some day getting hold of a champion . . . . Ted Yarosz was his nearest approach and he was the latter's second in most of his fights, working in the corner with Manager Ray Foutts . . . . . Both Teddy and Ray were badly broken up over Mike's death . . . . . And Lew Raymond, the matchmaker, had to be out of town visiting Vince Dundee when Mike was stricken ill . . . . . Several messages were left at his hotel to call the hospital and when he got back and put in the call he learned Mike had passed on.

Dr W. D. McClelland, the boxing commissioner, did a nice thing for Mike one night in McKeesport . . . . . It was just after the first of the year and Mike had a chance to make himself some money seconding a boxer, but didn't have the cost of his license, so the commissioner, who used to play ball with Mike in the kid days, dug down and loaned him the wherewithal and Mike went to work . . . . . Mike told the story himself . . . . . Thought it was very decent of the Doctor.

Some of the folks are finding fault with the play of the Pirates, but the heck of it is they're winning, and that's what counts . . New York sports writers traveling with the Giants, report back home that the Western clubs are trying to burn up the champions by telling them that the club they fear in this year's race is our Pittsburgh outfit . . . Better watch out . . . That's how they got the Terrymen stirred up last year . . . and look at what they did!—HARRY KECK.

Roughhouse Glover Beats Alabama Kid

CINCINNATI, May 10.—(AP.)—Roughhouse Glover, Jacksonville, Fla., middleweight who was knocked out here recently in one round by the Alabama Kid, of Dover, O., gained revenge last night when he decisively defeated the Kid in a return 12-round bout.

After losing the first three rounds, Glover began showing sensational form and carried off the remaining nine.

GOODRICH SALES SHOW BIG INCREASE

When the new Goodrich Safety Silvertown, with a life-saving invention called the Golden Ply, was first announced, it took the country by storm. Goodrich dealers were flooded with orders as thousands rushed to buy this 3 times safer, longer-wearing tire.

According to the latest reports from The B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company, sales of the new Safety Silvertown with the Life-Saver Golden Ply continue to show wide gains throughout the country.

No more RUINED TUBES

Goodrich made a lot of special tubes. One-half of each tube was made of the new Gold and Black construction.

The other half of the best old-style compound. They purposely ran them flat.

The old-style construction was ripped to shreds in less than a mile. The Gold and Black half was unharmed. Don't you want this many, many times tougher tube in your tires? Especially when you have to pay no more for it.

Goodrich Gold and Black Tube

Now . . . get the tire with the Golden Ply and be 3 times safer from blow-outs

Get months of extra mileage, too—at no extra cost!

What would happen if a blow-out threw your car out of control? Could you avoid landing in a ditch, hitting a telephone pole or crashing into an oncoming car? Probably not. Especially if you were eating up the miles along some fast highway.

When your speedometer flashes 40, 50 and 60—mile after mile—can you imagine how terrific the heat inside the tire becomes? The rubber and fabric begin to separate. A blister starts . . . And grows . . . bigger and bigger, until BANG! A blow-out! And a terrible drag pulls your car off the road.

An amazing invention!

To protect you from blow-outs—to give you a tire that will stand up under today's terrific speeds—every new Goodrich Safety Silvertown Tire has the Life-Saver Golden Ply. This remarkable engineering development resists heat. Rubber and fabric don't separate. Thus blisters don't form inside the tire. The great, unseen cause of blow-outs is thus prevented before it begins. This claim is not just shop talk.

Racing daredevils tested the Golden Ply at breakneck speeds; not one blow-out. Similar tires without the Golden Ply failed at one-third the distance the Golden Ply Silvertowns were run.

This, Mr. Motorist, is what the world needed. A tire safer from blow-outs at high speeds. A tire that can "take it". And you can be sure of extra mileage. For with the destructive effects of internal heat eliminated by the Golden Ply, the rugged Silvertown will outwear ordinary tires by months!

Play safe. Think of yourself, your family. Think of the "other fellow", too. Put a set of these Goodrich Golden Ply Silvertowns on your car. Remember, they cost not a penny more than other standard tires.

TWO GAMES SCHEDULED THIS EVENING IN CITY LEAGUE

BOOKS TO TEST SLAB STAFF OF MT. OLIVER

Two games are scheduled for City League this evening, the Mt. Oliver nine goes to Olympia Park to meet the Books, the defending champions, and the J. J. Vaughns, of the North Side, make the trio to McKinley Park to hook up with Beltzhoover.

Ray Miller and his Mt. Oliver aggregation have a tough assignment at Mt. Washington. The Books will be fighting to get back into another winning streak after the setback at Dormont last night. The champs have scored 37 runs in three league games so far, so it is evident that Mt. Oliver's pitching staff is in for a tough evening.

The Vaughans, under Harp Vaughan, face a test in Beltzhoover. This game should attract a fine crowd to McKinley Park. Beltzhoover did not look so good in the opener at Olympia Park, but this was the first time that the team had played together, and it is likely that Manager George Rounds will have the boys in better shape for tonight's tussle.

Only one game is scheduled in the West Penn League, this bringing together Library and the Waner club.

In the Greater Pittsburgh League, a local classic is carded at the Frazier street grounds when the Oakland Ambassadors clash with Hazelwood.

The Books and Dormont nines put on a real tussle at Dormont last evening, Dormont winning, 7 to 5, behind Red Whitemore's steady hurling. Red gave up eight safe hits, but kept them scattered, while Dormont bunched blows in the fifth to score four runs and sew up the game. The score by innings.

In the County League, the Cavanaughs defeated Duplate, 3 to 2; Averill Indians walloped Acme, 10 to 2 in the Universal League; Fair Oaks upset Debold, 10 to 2 and Millvale beat the Twenty-ninth Warders, 7 to 3 in the Steel City circuit; Apollo won over Arnold, 11 to 2 and Natrona took Vandergrift, 4 to 3 in the Allegheny-Kiski Valley League and in the Metro loop, Prosperity beat the Rovers, 15 to 1.

Honus Says:

By HONUS WAGNER
Former Star, Now Coach of Pirates.

To the Sports Editor:

A young man about 20 asked me what I thought he ought to do in life. I told him I thought he ought to do the thing he liked best and could do best. He had an idea that the world was going to the dogs, and what use would it be to get somewhere? He said he wanted to be a ball player and he had an idea that things were so hectic these days that maybe he would be wasting his time training so hard.

Honus Wagner

I told him if he had the stuff he should try to be a ball player and not worry about the world, which would be right where it is now when he made good. It is true that a lot of fellows are in a hurry and worry, but they don't stop to think that everything has to keep on going and will keep on going, and if you do a good job today the future will take care of itself.

There were a lot of people worrying about the future 50 years ago, so they tell me, and I know it was true 30 years ago.

Regards,
HONUS WAGNER.

COURSE READY FOR RUNYAN

By TOM BIRKS

When Paul Runyan, the dapper little golf professional from White Plains, N. Y., who cleaned up big in the winter tournaments, steps to the initial tee at the Highland Country Club tomorrow afternoon in that exhibition match, he will find the popular Wellington Heights course just as tough as it is possible to get the 6,700-yard layout.

Greenskeeper John Quaill and Sam Parks, Sr., chairman of the Greens committee, spent considerable time during the past two days dressing up the course, getting the tees back just as far as possible and figuring out strategic points for the placing of the pins.

PAIRED WITH LOEFFLER

Runyan has been paired with Emil Loeffler and the two will meet Sam Parks, Jr., and Vince Eldred in 18-holes of four ball, best ball play. Links critics are of the opinion that the best ball score will be under par, possibly as low as 66.

J. D. O'Neil, local public links commissioner, has announced that the public links committee will hold a special session at the Fort Pitt Hotel this evening. It is likely that all the municipal links dates will be set at this gathering, and plans laid for the National Public Links tourney here in August.

More permits for the North and South Allegheny County Park golf courses have already been sold than were sold in the entire season last year. This bears out the general feeling that golf is in for a better year.

PITT GOLFERS WIN

For the second time this season, the University of Pittsburgh golf team yesterday had little difficulty defeating the Dukes, of Duquesne, over the links of the St. Clair Country Club, by a 6-to-0 point score. Regis Wolff, captain of the Panthers, and No. 1 player found himself with a tough opponent in Francis Totten, but the Panther captain finally won the match, 1 up.

Claude McKee, No. 2 player for Pitt, defeated Anderton, of the Dukes, 5 and 4; John Wasco kicked in with a medal score of 75 to defeat Bill Lesinak, 7 and 6, and Art Matthews, who plays No. 4 for Pitt, flashed a brilliant 74, two shots over par, to swamp Jack Heffner, 8 and 6.

In the four ball, best ball matches, Wolff and Matthews defeated Totten and Heffner, 5 and 4, while McKee and Wasco stopped Anderton and Lesinak, 7 and 6.

GRAYS VICTORS OVER DUCKS IN OPENER

The Zanesville Grays stepped off on the right foot in defense of their Mid-Atlantic League title as the sturdy minor league circuit got its pennant chase under way with four games yesterday by taking into camp the Dayton Ducks, but the battle was much closer than the score might indicate.

The Grays, playing on their own lot, won, 6 to 1, when Willie Davis hurled a five-hit game. Zanesville was able to garner only six blows from the combined delivery of Engleman and Berger, but a home run by Young and a timely single with the bases loaded in the fourth provided the runs.

At Beckley, the Black Knights slugged out an 11 to 5 victory over Johnstown; Wheeling Stogies trimmed the Charleston Senators, 9 to 7, at Charleston, and Huntington staged a four-run rally in the eighth inning at Springfield to defeat the Pirates, 6 to 5.

Starting Date, Rules Set For Softball Tourney

SOFTBALL ENTRY BLANK

Amateur Softball Tournament Editor,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph:

Please enter my team in your Western Pennsylvania Amateur Softball Tournament.

..... (Team) ..... (Manager).

..... (Address) ..... (Section of City).

..... (State if outside City limits).

(Upon receipt of entry, cards to be filled in with additional information will be sent to managers.)

The North Side, Herron Hill and Ford City share the honor of getting in the first entries for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's amateur softball tournament. Manager L. Susman has entered the Herron Hill Trojans, Manager Theodore Spry the Rallynuts, of the North Side, and Manager W. Monroe the Macks, of Ford City.

The week of Sunday, June 10, has been set for the opening of play in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's big amateur softball tournament, the winner of which in the senior competition will represent Pittsburgh in the national tournament to be played at the World Fair in Chicago in September under the auspices of the Hearst newspapers.

Tournament rules also have been prepared, as follows:

Teams will be bracketed and will play through a round robin series of one game a week to determine the finalists, and the tournament proper then will proceed to determine the winners in the various classes. All winning teams will receive trophies, and emblems will go to the individual players.

SANCTIONED AMATEUR PLAY

An Amateur Softball Association of America sanction fee of $1 per team will be assessed, plus 10 cents per individual player. In return for this the players will receive tournament pins which will identify them as sanctioned eligible players. The teams also will receive form cards to be filled out and filed with the tournament secretary and an official rule book. A protest board will be set up to determine disputes and a $5 protest fee will be asked for consideration of protests. This is to eliminate petty protests which will not stand up under the rules. If a protest is allowed and a game is ordered thrown out or replayed because of the claims made the fee will be returned; if not, it will revert to the tournament fund.

All players in the tournament must be certified as amateurs by the local commissioner, Harry Keck, sports editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Official umpires will be available for teams which desire them at nominal fees, but it is not necessary to use these officials.

Teams will play only one game a week and will have the entire week in which to play the game by mutual consent of the opposing managers.

It will be obligatory on the part of the manager of the winning team to send the score of the game, on a prepared blank which will be furnished to the tournament secretary, to receive credit for the victory. Protests must be made in writing, accompanied by fee, within 48 hours after a game is played.

Competition will be limited to the use of 12 and 14-inch balls, the former to be used on diamonds with 60-foot base lines and the latter on diamonds with 45-foot base lines.

LEADING TEAMS FOES IN CUP GOLF PLAY

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, May 10.—(AP.)—The draw today for the opening Scotch foursome matches tomorrow in Walker Cup competition paired the leading teams of the United States and Great Britain against each other in the feature match.

Johnny Goodman, United States Open titleholder, and Lawson Little, the Californian, who had defeated the other three American combinations in practice rounds, were drawn against Cyril Tolley and Roger Wethered, leading twosome of the British side.

The other pairs were: Capt. Francis Ouimet and George T. Dunlap, Jr., United States, versus Jack McLean and Eric McCruvie, Great Britain; Gus Moreland and Jack Westland, United States, versus Harry Bentley and Eric Fiddian, Great Britain; and Max Marston and Chandler Egan, United States, versus Capt. the Hon. Michael Scott and Sam McKinlay.

The real reason for the withdrawal of Lionel Munn from the British team, the Associated Press was told today, was an insult passed to him by another member of the British team at dinner Tuesday night.

The exact remarks were not learned, but it was enough to send Munn to his room to pack his bags and leave forthwith for Ireland.

The Royal and Ancient, in announcing his withdrawal and the substitution of Leonard Crawley, merely said that Munn was "indisposed."

SELLING WAVES SWEEP STOCKS DOWNWARD

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP.)—Stock prices dropped sharply today under selling waves that swept many issues to new low levels for the year or longer.

Losses ranged from 1 to around 5 points at the worst, although there were some mild recoveries later. There was no specific news development to account for the severity of the decline, but various commission houses said that "discouraged" liquidation was largely responsible.

The ticker tape fell several minutes in arrears during the downward rush and some sizeable blocks of the more speculative shares changed hands. Considerable short selling was reported, but some quarters believed that much of the activity was caused by the lightening of long accounts.

Commodities were not altogether in agreement. Wheat and other grains rallied 1 to more than 2 cents a bushel, but rubber and silver sagged and cotton was hesitant. Bonds of the secondary variety were a little heavy. The dollar was fairly firm in foreign exchange dealings.

Wall street was concerned over the large vote accorded the amendment to the Fletcher-Rayburn bill which would have barred margin trading in securities. While the amendment was beaten, the implications of the vote were not cheering to exchange members.

Brokerage opinion, as a whole, was that the equities market continues to remain under the influence of the confused state of mind which apparently exists among present and prospective security holders with regard to the probable effect of the various measures now under consideration by Congress.

While further discussions on silver were indicated in reports from Washington, speculative propoents of the metal saw little hope of any mandatory legislation being passed in the near future.

Preliminary figures of the Federal Reserve Board showed that the value of department store sales throughout the country for April was 5 per cent larger than in April a year ago. It was thought there would have been a much larger increase had it not been for the fact that Easter this year was earlier than last and the 1934 estimate included no Easter shopping while the figures for the 1933 month included two weeks of such trade. At the same time, owing to higher prices, it was believed that the volume may have been under that of the previous year.

Although total bank clearings for the past week were slightly under those for the preceding period, they were substantially higher than a year ago, according to Dunn & Bradstreet. The past week's total was $5,146,588,000 compared with $4,302,595,000 in the 1933 week.

SUGAR CONTROL DRAFT NEAR

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Sugar beet and sugar cane crop control, as authorized by the Costigan-Jones Act, is being drafted today by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

It will follow closely the Agricultural Department's program now in effect on other commodities including wheat, cotton and tobacco. Within 30 days Wallace must proclaim a processing tax in operation, and offer rental payments for compliance with the plan.

Proceeds from the processing tax will amount to about $63,000,000 a year. Approximately $20,000,000 will be distributed as benefit payments to the cane growers within the continental United States who sign pledges for control.

Wallace is empowered to use the remaining $43,000,000 and the taxes from processing of insular sugar cane, either for general benefits to agriculture, or as a bait for sugar reduction in these outside areas.

The processing tax applies on final production or direct consumption sugar. A compensating tax may be levied against imported direct-consumption sugar.

WHEAT SOARS DAY'S LIMIT

CHICAGO, May 10.—For the time since October 17 last, the wheat market today soared to the extreme permissible limit of 5 cents a bushel. Immense speculative purchases accompanied the rise.

Startling crop damage advices, virtually unabated drought, and persistant widespread storms of dust furnished the incenttive for the general rush to buy.

Extreme maximum top prices for wheat were heald as the day's trading ended, with the close strong, 4⅞-5 cents up, compared with yesterday's finish, July 88⅝, corn 17⅝-21⅛ up, oats 2½-2¾ advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12 cents.

Rails May Prod U. S. Upward

By B. C. FORBES

ARE WE on the eve of revolutionizing our railway facilities on a scale which will infuse prosperity into various heavy industries, those producing durable goods? If, as Will Hays tells me, the motion picture industry spent half a billion dollars in switching from silence to sound, how many hundreds of millions of dollars would be put into circulation if every existing passenger train and engine were supplanted by the new stream-line type, propelled by Diesel motors or other modern power?

Mr. Forbes

After a long period of relative standpatism, railway managers are instituting innovations which fire the imagination.

Quite within the range of possibility is the discarding as rapidly as practicable of existing rolling stock and the substitution of equipment capable of covering a hundred miles an hour.

Such a transformation would necessitate much work in adapting roadbed to the new high speeds.

And, of course, every up-to-date passenger car would have to be air-conditioned. That would mean more millions of expenditures in a field which would not take business away from any other existing industry.

By giving rein to the imagination, one could envisage America's rail transportation supplemented and complemented by ownership and unification of motor buses and air lines, forming a rounded-out, nation-wide system of transportation transcending that of any other country.

ALWAYS ARISES the sternly practical question: "Where is the money coming from?"

Admittedly, railway companies will have to be given more latitude in accumulating earnings during active times than they have been given heretofore by the Interstate Commerce Commission. It may be, also, that in early stages financial assistance will have to be extended by governmental agencies.

But it is logical to reason that new trains approaching the speed of aeroplanes and far excelling them in comfort, will attract greatly increased patronage. If, anticipated, the new trains embody comforts not heretofore furnished, and can outspeed even the swiftest motor buses, surely they will lure passengers who would have preferred either buses or aeroplanes to old-fashioned trains.

The flourishing of railroad building did much to stimulate the spread of prosperity in this country in the generation following the Civil War.

It is entirely within the bounds of probability that a rebirth of gigantic expenditures on rail transportation facilities will contribute incalculably to raising the country towards new heights of prosperity during the second third of this century.

IT HAS BEEN fashionable for politicians, and for many others who ought to know better, to belittle the part railroads play in our national functioning. The truth is, of course, that the amount of domestic freight moved by all non-railway facilities combined is extremely small in contrast with the total moved over rails.

We cannot afford to allow our railroads to sink to the depths of bankruptcy, inefficiency, decrepitude—at least not at this stage of our civilization. The dependable yardstick of a nation's progress, usually, is the state and extent of its transportation facilities.

WASHINGTON has not enhanced its repudiation by its ill-founded prosecution of Andrew W. Mellon.

JAPAN HAS been hunting trouble. The indications are that she will end up by finding it.

River Users Fight Plan To Assess Tolls

By GEORGE H. SNYDER,
Business Editor

USERS OF RIVER transportation are joining in opposing a bill before the House of Representatives which would place a toll on all shipments passing through locks on the Ohio River and its tributaries. The toll, it is feared, might have the effect of completely stifling river commerce which has played a vital part in the development of the Pittsburgh industrial district.

The bill, introduced by Congressman J. Buell Snyder of Perryopolis, representing the Twenty-fourth District consisting of Fayette and Somerset counties, would place a charge of 1 cent per long ton on all freight as it moved through each lock.

Coal constitutes about 70 per cent of the freight moved by the rivers in this district. The average coal shipment from the upper Monongahela River passes through five locks. Thus it would add 5 cents a ton to the cost of moving most of the river coal to Pittsburgh's industries.

* * *

Would Cost Over Million Annually

COAL PRODUCERS estimate that the bill would cost users of coal shipped on the rivers in this district about a million dollars annually. In an active business year, such as 1929, about 24,000,000 tons of coal were shipped on the rivers in this district alone.

While the greatest share of the cost would apply to coal, the burden would be even heavier on industries shipping products to points on the Mississippi. Steel, as an example, passes through more than 50 locks on the Ohio and such an extra cost might deprive the industry of most of the advantages of the use of the rivers.

Members of the Pittsburgh Coal Exchange have been most active in the movement protesting against the bill.

* * *

Covers Only This District

LOCAL RIVER interests are puzzled by the fact that the bill is aimed only at the Ohio River and its tributaries and would place no simalar tolls on other inland waterways. It is considered particularly unfair in view of the fact that the Federal government is spending large sums of money for the building of coastal inland waterways with no apparent intentions of assessing the users of them.

It is found even more surprising that the bill originates from a Congressman whose district, a large producer of river coal, would be particularly affected in an unfavorable manner by having to bear the extra expense.

If replies to box number advertisements are to be mailed, postage must be paid for by advertiser.

Chickie's Daughter

By ELENORE MEHERIN

CHAPTER LXVI

"No one else can take my place, Pippin?"

Kevin looked down, young, gay, lovable, the color mounting to his cheeks. Suddenly Pippin remembered the first time Kevin kissed her, the smile on his sweet, flashing mouth and his eyes laughing on hers.

"That may mean everything, Pippin. It may mean nothing except that I'm old and you know me so well and I gave you your first good doll."

"And my first GOOD kiss."

"Did I? I want more to give you the last."

She wondered if it were love made Kevin talk like this. Deep within her she felt sure. He loved her—oh, he loved her greatly. But she didn't want to be fooled. So she pretended to take it lightly. Just a game. A happy way a man has of talking to a girl. The girl understands. She knows it's for fun. All men do this!

But she went over it all happily just before she dropped to sleep; felt his arm about her, his warm, exciting face near hers; his mouth which looked stern yet was so tender leaving the kiss which still glowed sweetly on her lips.

Oh, he loved her. Of course he did! She could wake up with a song in her thoughts that next morning. It didn't matter so much about Paula's treachery.

"Just the same," averred Kathleen, when they were studying together the next afternoon, "something should be done about it. It's like keeping a rattlesnake in the house."

The words were just spoken when Colleen Lowell entered the room and locked the door after her.

Colleen Calls Meeting

Colleen was a frank, homely girl with a flat, boyish figure, green eyes, freckles, and a great charm. She was the most popular girl in the sorority, looked up to by the younger members, admired by the older ones. Colleen had a gay, impudent manner and great executive ability.

She sat on the edge of the crude desk and said quietly: "We don't want this thing to get out of the house. I've made Paula write down what she admitted yesterday. I'm calling a meeting after dinner and she shall read it before us all. Also I went with Paula to the committee today. Paula asked that your name be included on the program when the play is produced. She said you had given valuable suggestions and she wouldn't feel quite right unless some credit is accorded.

"Paula did it prettily; the committee was impressed. The dear, generous girl, willing to share her honors! Paula is, of course, furious, but that's that.

"As a matter of fact, Pippin, it's her word against yours. There's no way of proving how much of the play you wrote if she takes a notion to deny it. We may KNOW she isn't capable; we can't prove that she isn't."

Paula read her statement before her 30 colleagues. She read it with blazing eyes and a challenging defiance in her voice.

"It's true that Pippin did most of the writing. She wrote three of the four scenes without help from me. But the idea of entering the contest was mine. I had a play all written. It was better than the winning skit. Pippin threw it overboard just so she could fudge in and get the credit with me!"

Reads Both Plays

Colleen stopped her.

"You could have submitted your play, Paula. Pippin couldn't have prevented this. However, if your play is better and she threw it overboard through meanness and to deprive you of honor, that was very wrong. In justice, your cause should also be heard.

"I'm going to give you this justice. I have the play you wrote here, Paula, and I have the winner which you admit Pippin wrote. I'm going to read both. We'll judge if there is truth in your claim and if your original play is really better."

Paula turned a burning scarlet. She had no choice but to sit down.

Colleen read Pippin's play. It danced through the room. The lines sparkled and were very gay. They were greeted with spontaneous applause.

She read Paula's play. There were girls in the chapter majoring in English. They squirmed and felt ashamed; there were others who had dates or studying. They were indignant to have to sit here and listen. They yawned and looked at Paula with withering contempt.

The color in Paula's cheeks gradually stained to her throat. But Colleen read on. She read well: she could not lift with buoyance the dull, flat lines. She came to the last page and was greeted with stiff, bored silence.

"We have heard the two plays. Each girl can judge for herself. That is all! Not a word of this is to go beyond this chapter room."

When they were alone, Kathleen said cryptically:

"You're worse off than ever, Pippin! She's burnt up. You and I will pay."

Dances With Kevin

Saturday night, Pippin went dancing with Kevin. She wore a lavender dress with the deep amethyst earrings which made her eyes shine softly. As they glided across the floor she caught images of herself in the mirror and felt happy because she looked well.

When they returned to their table, Kevin leaned forward, saying with a smile:

"It's been a grand two weeks, Pippin! Your eyes are purple. They catch the color from these stones. Did David happen to tell you I'm going East?"

She was shocked.

"Oh, not for so very long. The hospital will be finished next September. You know that. This stock market crash has made all financial arrangements uncertain. No one knows whether the market will rise again or go down for a long term. We don't want to take any chances of the appropriation vanishing. I'll get the equipment and have it paid for before anything can happen."

"Will you be gone long, Kevin?"

"Maybe four months, and maybe six. I'm going to do some work in pathology under Freyer. I need to brush up on this."

Pippin looked at him with her eyes wide; her eyes, though she was not aware of this, filled with a great, stormy yearning.

So that Kevin said abruptly: "Martha, I wish I were rich! I wish I had just a little money."

Breathless: "Why?"

"I could buy you leis of gardenias! You wear them so well."

"Is that all, Kevin?"

"And it wouldn't do at all to dress you in ginghams. A man should be shot who would take a good student like you, Pippin; a dear, lovely thing, and put you in a kitchen or put you anywhere in the dark."

Glad Others Gone

She said, trembling: "It might not seem dark."

His eyes, too, were glowing. A faint color tinged his cheeks. She thought he looked wonderfully handsome. Strong and keen as a blade.

"And I'd buy you a large suitcase, Pippin?"

"What would I do with a suitcase, Kevin?"

"Pack your things and take a long, long journey. Oh, come on, Martha. Let's have another dance."

She rested her cheek against the smooth black of his tuxedo and felt the beating of his heart; felt melting away with love for him and longing.

He was taller than Bill and Bill was a little tall for comfort in dancing. Yet somehow she never felt a strain, never got that kink in her neck when dancing with Kevin. She felt drifting like a breeze, unconscious of the floor when Kevin took her in his arms.

They stood in the little room when they reached home that night.

He said: "Pippin, I'm glad the others are away. I wish they were never coming back."

"Oh why, Kevin?"

He stood there smiling at her. Suddenly he raised his hands and ran his two forefingers across her eye-brows.

"I only mean that I want you to miss me. I don't want them here when I'm away."

"Do you want me to be alone and neglected, Kevin?"

An odd smile went across his lips. "It will give you a fine chance to study! It's your last quarter in college. I think it would be very worthy of you to cut out all social engagements and concentrate on your work."

"Are you asking me to do this, Kevin?"

Promises to Wait

"I'd like to ask it. I wish I had the right to ask it."

"Haven't you? Why haven't you?"

"Of course I haven't! It's so obvious."

She waited, wanting him to say more but without the will to demand. Then her hand fluttered up and touched the lapel of his coat.

"I'll cut them all out, Kevin. Everything!"

He covered her hand, then in a moment, closed his arms about her. He kissed her eyes softly and her throat and her lips.

He said, seeking: "Pippin, a long time ago when you were very young, you were in love with me, weren't you?"

She met his eyes bravely: "I still am, Kevin. I'm still in love with you. I love you with all my heart!"

She could feel the color rush to his cheeks. She thought his eyes suddenly filled.

"Will you stay that way, sweetheart? Always?"

"I will."

It was like a music thrumming away in her mind. She recalled his look, his voice and the words he said. Wanting her to wait for him—this was what he meant. She would. A hundred years!

ADMINISTRATION OF PRESIDENT ARTHUR—CHINESE IMMIGRATION CUT—CIVIL SERVICE REFORMED

President Chester A. Arthur (1881-1885) disappointed the Republican party by his non-partisan attitude.

His administration is memorable for: The limitation of Chinese immigration, aiming to protect labor standards (1882); the Civil Service (Pendleton) Act, replacing the spoil system by merit system in filling governmental offices; the development of the Navy, and other beneficial measures.

INDIAN MUTINY CRUSHED—FIRST RELIEF OF LUCKNOW

In the Victorian Age (1837-1901) recognition of human rights made great peaceful progress at home, but colonial expansion and protection of trade involved Great Britain in wars.

Indians in the "Homeland" of the English East India Co. (first charter granted by Queen Elizabeth) revolted (1857) against the rule of the company, threatening British subjects with massacre. This mutiny—subdued with much bloodshed—led to the transfer of the government from the East India Company to the British Crown, Queen Victoria becoming Empress of India.

THE ELECTRIC FURNACE—ELECTROCHEMICAL STEEL REFINING

Machine parts (shafts, axles, gears, etc.) subject to severe stresses, must be of especially strong material, uniform in composition and free from flaws. Steel, possessing these qualities, is obtained by refining Bessemer- or Open Hearth- steel in the electric furnace, a large crucible heated by electric arc or by electro-magnetic induction. The process of refining consists in holding the molten steel in contact with a slag able to reduce impurities. First slag consist of lime, iron oxide and silica (oxidizing, black slag), which is removed. A second (the reducing, white slag) is produced by adding carbon, silicon or calcium carbide to remove more completely the sulphur and also oxygen.

Advantages of electro-chemical steel refining: Rapidity of heating, accurate control of temperature, freedom from contamination by combustion gases, higher degree of refining, smaller quantity of ferro-alloys needed.

THE MENDELIAN RATIO: 3 TO 1

The gene (which controls one unit character) is dominant if it shows its presence when mated with a contrasting gene; the latter is recessive. Black coats in guinea pigs are always dominant, white coats recessive. First filial generation of pure black and white parents are hybrids showing the dominant gene, black (recessive gene hidden). The second filial generation will be one pure dominant (black), two hybrids (black), one pure recessive (white). By looks, black: white = 3:1. The hybrids receive genes from both sides, the pures only from one (left). (General Science)

EVA POINTS OUT THE HAPPY LANDS TO UNCLE TOM

Uncle Tom's Cabin (pub. 1852), the most widely read novel ever written in America, is the work of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe forcefully presenting sufferings of slaves, arousing world against slavery.

Uncle Tom is sold by his pressed master Shelby along with Harry, little son of Eliza, who flees with him over the icy Ohio. Tom is purchased by St. Clare, whose daughter Eva Tom has rescued. Young Eva dies, St. Clare is shot, Tom sold to cruel Legree. Cassy and Emmeline, women slaves—feigning escape—hide. Tom, suspected, is whipped to death. Young Shelby, arriving too late to buy Tom free, helps the women in their flight. They meet a wealthy sister of Eliza's husband in search for the also escaped brother. Casay is revealed to be mother of Eliza. All are happily reunited in Canada. (Am. Lit.)

STEAM HEATING SYSTEM

Steam heating system (above) consists of a boiler (in basement) connected to radiators (in rooms) by piping. Boiler generates steam, which is led into radiators. There it condenses, giving off the latent heat (circa 537 cal. per gram water, necessary to convert it into steam at 212° F. temp. and expand it against the atmosphere). This heat is conveyed to surroundings by convection and radiation as condensed water leaves radiators practically at boiling temp. Steam heat utilizes about 65% of heat energy of fuel, gives clean, quick heat, is suitable for tall buildings. Disadvantages: High initial cost, lack of ventilation, dries air, space taken by radiators, need of greater care. (General Science)

Our Tailor Still Trusts Us

Spring brings out the strange colonies and queer people.

Most of them are as dizzy as a bee in an electric fan.

That nudist business is merely a manifestation of sporadic idiocy and intermittent lunacy that breaks loose every few years.

Man clothes himself against the elements. The Constitution gives you the choice of underwear or mustard plasters. Many years ago there was a gag known as the Kneipp cure for rheumatism. You were supposed to trot barefooted through the dewy heather at dawn. That's the best way to get neuralgia ever discovered by science.

But many a bug unleashed his dogs and paraded the everloving bunions through the romping clover. When the newspapermen interviewed Kneipp he was wearing rubber boots and a hot electric iron for a watch charm. He had made the mistake of showing his pupils how to parade in a bog.

The first real nudist colony we ever saw was outside of a prominent European city. Every one of those nudists weighed 400 pounds and looked as if he had escaped from Macy's parade of inflated monsters. They seemed to think the human figure was eight.

As a spy for the reform societies we aimed the lorgnette at another colony on the Rio Hudson. They were in green pastures guarded by a nearsighted sheep dog. We sold each one of them a pink and green paper hat.

There is something beautiful in the thought of leaping from hill to crag, clad only in butterfly wings. But the theory never works. The finished picture resembles a jail delivery in a Turkish bath. While admitting the body should have sunlight and air, yet clothes are essential and dignified. We have yet to see a picture of Napoleon crossing the Alps minus his trousers.

The only time the Bug goes nudist is when he scrubs the carcass in his own private one-passenger bath tub. He locks the door, pulls down the shades and bangs away with turpentine and soap. That's human nature. Privacy dates back to the primitive man who growled softly to himself in the back of a cave.

And we will believe the nudists are right when turtles walk out from between their shells.

ODD FACTS

The world total of films produced last year was 2,100, of which 510 were made in America, 190 in England, 145 in Germany, and 140 in France. Japan claims to have turned out 780 films in the 12 months.

Tusks of the male African elephant usually weigh about 40 pounds, but some weigh more than 200 pounds each.

Worshippers at the sacred Crocodile Pool in Karachi dye their foreheads red, and "salaam" the oldest reptile whenever he appears on the surface.

A law has been passed in Smyrna that every male citizen up to the age of 60 must bring to the town hall each month one crow, "dead or alive," or suffer a fine.

One of the rarest hobbies in the world is that of making pictures from human hair. The only person believed to be following this peculiar avocation today is a barber in Scotland, who makes astonishingly realistic scenes with hair cut from heads of customers.

Doctors in England and Germany are using a new anesthetic which is injected directly into the blood, and it may replace ether in certain types of operations. It is called Evipan, and produces a deep, normal sleep within thirty seconds. The operation can be started immediately, and the patient awakes without any unpleasant after effects.

Girls are better sleepers than boys, according to recent official investigations. They drop off more quickly and rest more quietly.

How to End the Drain

Abolition of Oxcart Government Will Give the Federal Treasury Relief.

President Roosevelt's leadership is approaching a crucial test of its strength. This test will come when the President attempts to check the drain upon the Federal Treasury to finance the normal activities of state, county and local governments.

Unless this flow of federal funds into the several states is soon shut off, it will undermine the whole structure of federal credit and ultimately dry up the only source upon which federal services have to rely for their support.

Due to the emergency growing out of a world wide depression, the federal government has extended aid right and left to the governments of the several states and their political subdivisions. As a result, the federal government faces a four thousand million dollar deficit as its fiscal year draws to a close.

How much this deficit will be increased by the Congress now nearing adjournment, neither the President nor the leaders of the two houses can forecast with any degree of certainty.

Neither the President nor the Congress, however, can be unaware of the fact that in state after state, government of politicians, by politicians, and for politicians is bankrupting the taxpayers and forcing the citizens of those states to depend upon grants from the Federal Treasury for food, shelter and clothing, public education, public roads and public protection.

However necessary federal aid in financial non-federal services may have been during the emergency created by the depression, the time is fast approaching when the temporary nature of this necessity will have to be sternly emphasized in high places, if the so-called sovereign states are to regain and maintain their sovereignty.

Here is an issue in the congressional, state and local primaries and elections to be held in the next six months, which the pork barrel politicians of both parties will strive to dodge. It is an issue, however, in which the people have a vital interest, and given the leadership of the President, it can be made the paramount issue in every state in which state or national elections occur.

The way to end the drain upon the Federal Treasury to finance state, county and local governments, lies clear and straight before the people of the several states. They can, if they will, raise the standard and reduce the cost of government within their respective states by modernizing the obsolete system of county government, which has been handed down from the days when the oxcart was the chief means of transportation.

County governments throughout the Federal Union today number more than three thousand. They can easily be reduced to less than three hundred.

This reduction can be made in three ways:

First, by abolition of the county in metropolitan areas, where state and local governments are all-sufficient.

Second, by the consolidation of counties, outside of metropolitan districts, into larger areas.

Third, by the transfer from the county to the state of certain functions that can most efficiently be discharged under state control.

Lifting the yoke of this oxcart system of county government from the necks of the American people is no longer a local issue.

Oxcart government throughout the Federal Union today is a national issue, because state governments are now draining the Federal Treasury to pay the cost of this obsolete system.

Because it is a national issue, the American people have a right to look to the President and the Congress, as well as to the governors and legislators of the several states, for leadership in a national campaign to overthrow oxcart government before it bankrupts the taxpayers of the several states and undermines the credit structure of the federal government.

Illegal Political Signs

Candidates Who Offend Against Law and Good Manners Deserve No Votes.

Notwithstanding repeated warnings that the posting of political signs on public property, or on private property without the written consent of the owner, is definitely forbidden by an act of the Pennsylvania General Assembly approved March 10, 1903, posters advertising the candidacy of Herman C. A. Hofacker for the Legislature have been tacked within the last few days to a tree on the right of way—public property—of the Flaugherty's Run road in Findlay Township. Hofacker is a lawyer.

Although there are others, the Hofacker posters are specially cited because this is a particularly flagrant case. Hofacker was mentioned by name in the Sun-Telegraph of April 24 and again on April 30 as one of the candidates whose posters had been erected in violation of the law. As if in contemptuous answer, additional posters have been erected.

Illegal political posters are not only an offense against the law, but also an offense against good manners.

Candidates whose aspirations are thus advertised deserve no votes.

Library Vandals

It Was High Time That an Example Was Made of An Offender.

The disturbing statement was made at a Police Court hearing yesterday that the Carnegie Library sustains a loss of more than $5,000 a year through the mutilation and theft of books.

The fact was disclosed in connection with the case of a youth who had been arrested for mutilating a book. He was prosecuted as an example to other offenders. It was high time that an example was being made. Patience ceases to be a virtue when it costs the public $5,000 a year.

The accused boy admitted he mutilated a book because he wanted the material for school purposes. The Sun-Telegraph's "Pictorial Education" department is designed to furnish just such material. Mutilation of library books is inexcusable.

Learn a Language

Besides Your Own.

There is no longer any excuse for illiteracy in this country. Nor is there any excuse for any young American, no matter what the racial or national origin of his or her parents, not speaking English correctly.

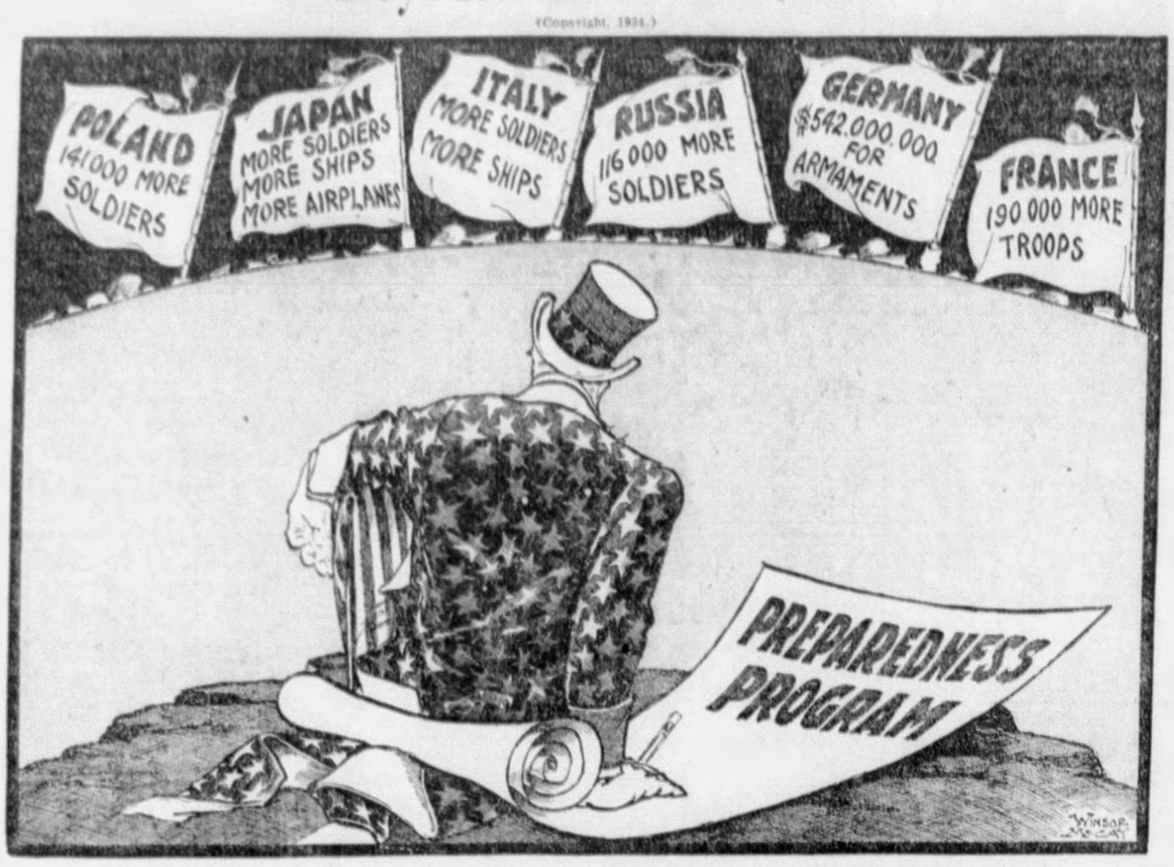
But, on the other hand, it is an excellent idea to know at least one foreign language. For example, Italian, the beautiful language of Dante and Petrarch.

Now there is an incentive for learning Italian. The government of that friendly nation, eager to promote good Italo-American relations, is offering trips to Italy for the ten high school and college students who each year show their skill in the Italian language.

Yes, the tickets are free.

'Beyond the Horizon'

(Copyright, 1934.)



Week-end reports from Geneva, the center of internationalism, can hardly have been assuring to our American advocates of unpreparedness.

Germany, we are "authoritavely" informed, has increased her army and navy budget for 1934 from $268,000,000 to $358,000,000, and her aviation budget from $28,000,000, to $84,000,000. In addition, the Nazi storm troopers get $100,000,000.

France is increasing her army by 190,000 men, and Poland—France's ally—has 'pushed her army up from 280,000 to 341,000."

Japan in three years has increased her armed forces from 100,000 to 456,000, and the Russian army has been expanded from 562,000 to 678,000, mainly on the Manchurian frontiers.

Italy, also. Besides 43,000 men added to her air and naval forces, Italy is building two more battleships and has made an ADDITIONAL ALLOTMENT of 480,000,000 lire for naval construction.

These signs from beyond the world horizon are ominous. They portend future wars, not far off. And in such a time the only way to keep America out of foreign wars, and to keep foreign wars out of America, is by PREPAREDNESS.

Our Army, our Navy and our air forces must be SUFFICIENT FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 10.—Literature's most recent deserter is the white-haired, blue-eyed Carl Van Vechten. Two years ago at the height of his writing career, he pushed aside his typewriter and has not written a line for publication since. That he will ever continue is problematical.

At the same time he gave up spirituous liquors. Not that the two went together or that he was overly addicted to wassail. He merely decided that for the time being at least he had had enough of each. A novel, well along at the time, was abandoned. Amateur photography is now his hobby.

Born in Cedar Rapids, Ia., Van Vechten's first inclinations were toward music. He became a New York music critic and has authored several compositions. His wife is Fania Marinoff, the sloe-eyed Russian actress, and their apartment was at one time the salon of arts and letters.

Later Van Vechten grew fascinated with life in Harlem, became its most famous white visitor and recorded some of his impressions in his best seller, "Nigger Heaven." He is regarded by feline fanciers as most informed on cats. His "The Tiger in the House" is a standard work.

There is a certain mental hyssop for the stroller in hunting for the typically American face among the crowds. Such a face is almost a rarity. As a rule when found, it is that of an out-of-towner, usually one suspects the Middle West. Perhaps the most typical American face, according to experts, is that of Walter Johnson, the baseball player. He was born in Kansas and is one of those fellows who wouldn't have to announce he was a Yank along the Strand or Place de l'Opera.

Down among the evening soap boxers fringing Madison Square the other evening, a hot gospeler was high tonsiling to prove that everything came from the earth and no group had a right to monopolize it. In pointing out the virtues of the soil, the trees, the wheat, etc., etc., he screamed in tremulous ecstasy: "My friends what doesn't come from the earth?" A passing smart alec through a taxi window shouted "Fish!" and raced on.

And there is Montague Glass' story of the cockney speaker on his portable platform at the entrance to Hyde Park. Mounting his rostrum, he looked benignly over the small knot at his feet and purred: "I shall now discuss the milk of human kindness!" A heckler called out: "Condense it!"

Another writer who has, like Van Vechten, made a hobby of photography, is Bob Davis. His collection of 1,000 celebrity faces is regarded as the finest work of its kind in America. He has a way of catching his subject off guard and giving the photograph an informality few have achieved. In the average photograph there is a consciousness that there is a camera around. By the magic of some hocus pocus Davis makes his subjects forget this. He will make and the other a guerdon for the sitter. The collection has been willed to the Metropolitan Museum.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

You are surprised and puzzled at the associates that some of your good friends seem to value highly.

In analyzing them for yourself you cannot see anything about them that is pleasingly attractive or interesting.

It may be that you do not know these persons intimately enough to appreciate their fine qualities.

You judge by appearance and social good manners.

You are influenced by clothes and the way they are worn or perhaps by manner of speech or intimations as to social standing.

Financial reputation or traditional "old family" standing is your guide in making friends.

Political office means much to you, also.

You would better revise your standards of what makes a desirable combination in choosing associates.

Those in humble position include many persons who have high ideals of sincerity, fine impulses, undoubted honesty and good taste.

When you think of companionship, you will get more from the person who rings true blue all the way through than from one with a skin-deep veneer of friendship.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

The Empty Window of Dreams

He stared at a window for seven years.

For seven years, summer or winter, through storm or sun, Richard Martin sat on a bench in Central Park, New York, and stared at a certain window, 15 stories above his head. Behind that window lived a woman. The staring man could not have seen her if she had come to the window; might not even have recognized her if she passed him. But once upon a time—

It began years before at a dance in New York. Henry Martin had lived for 26 years when he went to that dance. But from the hour he met pretty, widowed Mrs. Leckie those years ceased to matter. For the first time he felt really alive. At last he knew why he had been born!

For Mrs. Leckie, however, the hour had no such glamorous significance. Henry Martin was just another young man. Nor did his ardent courtship, in the days following, remove him from that category. She returned to Texas. He pursued her; tried vainly to see her; followed her back to New York. Still he remained just another young man. But a pesky one.

So Mrs. Leckie barred her door against him—and Henry Martin took his seat on a park bench opposite her home, and began to stare.

Henry had been a slender, eager youngster on the night of that memorable dance. Life was before him. He was rarin' to go. Where? He didn't know. But something would turn up! Mrs. Leckie turned up—and Henry stopped right there.

Henry stopped right there and began to stare. At a window—at a memory. The memory grew vaguer with the passing years. Henry grew fatter. He ceased exercising, gave up his work, left his respectable lodgings, slept in a beach shack, lived on chance nickels earned by selling old bottles.

One year, two, passed. Henry was still only 28, but already he seemed an old man. A shapeless, filthy old man, with matted red whiskers and stupid, staring eyes. Day after day, month after month, there he sat on his park bench, watching that distant window.

Seven years went—years that held the last, bright flame of youth. Hurrying past the bench went mobs of other men intent on building their lives, turning dreams into reality. But of that grim and glorious spectacle Henry Martin saw nothing. Life for him centered in one small window.

Ashamed? Regretful? Why should he be? Was he not giving his life for romance? Other men might spend themselves on the shoddy adventure of work. But he was living for love!

So Henry Martin, loafing away the years on a park bench, pleasantly and proudly rationalized—while the youth within him died and the bloat of old age crept over him in a gray and greasy tide.

Then suddenly one morning fate stripped Henry Martin of his pleasing picture of himself. The window was empty. Mrs. Leckie had left New York for good. He could still sit and stare, if he wished, but he could no longer dramatize that staring, even to himself. He could no longer pretend to be Life's Loyalest Lover. He was just a Park Bench Bum!

What did he think, I wonder, as this fact thudded home to him? How did he feel as he rose slowly out of his wrecked dream, out of his wasted years, and went stumbling into the avenue where he had no place, with eyesthat still stared—but that now, at last, saw himself and his dream for what they really were?

* * *

A true story? Yes. But not just a true story about Henry Martin.

A TRUE STORY ABOUT MILLIONS OF US WHO SPEND OUR LIVES STARING AT SOME EMPTY WINDOW.

Behind that window there once flamed some brief, bright dream. Love, perhaps, but far more often our own quickened vanity. Some sudden vision of power, glittering fame, which swoops upon our timid, colorless days; clutches our feverish frustrated imaginations glorifies us to ourselves.

Can we turn that dream into reality? Perhaps—if we aren't too lazy, too cowardly. Or we can find abetter dream, a greater reality.

BUT IT'S EASIER TO SIT AND STARE!

EASIER TO LET LIFE DRIFT WHILE WE LOAF ON SOME PARK BENCH OF SELF-PITY, OR RESENTMENT, OR WOUNDED EGOTISM—STARING AT THE DARKENED WINDOW OF THE PAST.

But some day the inevitable hour will come—perhaps with our dying breath—when we will see that the window has long been empty; when we will perceive ourselves and our foolish dreams as they really are.

How will we feel then, I wonder, as we stumble out into that highway in which we have made no place?

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

To My Friend

If I have failed you greatly,
I beg of you forget
Each poor and faulty phase of me;
But treasure the rest of me yet!

Because, had that perfection
I ever longed to win
Been mine, I should never have vexed you with
One moment of lack or of sin.

I should never have caused you sorrow
Or any brief pang of pain,
For I longed to clasp your hand in mine
And to lead you to joy's domain.

So I would have you remember
Not all I have failed to be;
But only the brighter, better part,
The bloom and the promise of me!

Text for Today

I am weak, then am I strong.—II. Corinthians, xii: 10.

Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distress for Christ's sake: for when

Human Side of the News

The Strange Story of Edward Ridley, Who, Though Wealthy, Refused to Leave New York's East Side

By Edwin C. Hill

THE crowded East Side of New York—its street boys and its patriarchs alike—called him "Old Ridley" as he moved in silence through the slums. A stranger, seeing him, must have paused and murmured: "Surely, a character out of Dickens." And the characterization would have been oddly accurate, for the old man's father, the first Edward Ridley, had fled the England of Dickens in 1849 to escape the debtors' prison which kindly Mr. Pickwick and Micawber had known so well.

This son, Edward Albert Ridley, at 88 years, had his office in a sub-cellar 35 feet below the sidewalks of New York. He invariably wore an overcoat, sometimes two, and his great, white beard straggled almost to his waist. And yet, he was a man of $4,000,000, the last of the Ridleys, the merchant princes of the 70's and the 80's. The first Ridley had pyramided his peddler's pack into a department store, which in 1887 did a business of $6,000,000, employed 2,500 persons and catered to the Astors, the Vanderbilts and the Goulds. Then northward the course of Manhattan took its way. But the Ridleys stayed behind, secure in their belief that the mountain would come to Mahomet.

* * *

His Expectation Of Murder Fulfilled

IT was not to be. Broadway, Sixth avenue and Fifth avenue took the place of Grand and Allen streets, and the House of Ridley went into decline, finally to pass out in 1901. For another 33 years, Edward Ridley stayed at the old diggings, managing his real estate affairs in his subterranean office. And with him stayed Herman Moensch, as his secretary. On the third of January, 1931, Edward Ridley found the body of Moensch on the floor of the sub-cellar, riddled by bullets.

"The murderer meant to get me. My turn is next," said old Ridley, but he went on, as usual, about his affairs. On the tenth of May of last year, the police found the bodies of Ridley and of his new secretary, Louis Weinstein, on the same stones, murdered as had been Moensch, and by the same weapon. Recently, in the Surrogate's Court of New York County, the surrogate, after weighing the facts of a strange story, dismissed the claim of 67-year-old Jens Nelson to the Ridley estate. The trail of this trial has led to Norway and to the lumber camps of Michigan. Nelson told this story:

Edward Ridley, when 21, married Orline Nelson, a Norwegian immigrant girl, against the wishes of his father and then gave her up on the threat of being disinherited. She went to her brother, who was working in a lumber camp in Northern Michigan and there he was born, Jens Nelson, the son of Orline and Edward Albert Ridley. He offers legal documents to prove his case.

He has submitted the testimony of the husband of Ridley's dead sister, that she told him that Ridley had married a Norwegian girl and then forsaken her. The lawyers for the estate branded Nelson's claim a fraud and the court threw it out.

The greater mystery remains—that of the murders of the Allen street cellar. Strange and many have been the happenings in old New York in the last quarter of a century, but it has known nothing more bizarre, in fact or fiction, than the Ridley Case.

Two Young Ladies Of Advanced Years

DR. WALTER PITKIN has made famous the phrase "Life Begins at Forty" and he has most of us believing it. And those who do not, may reflect on the cases of two young ladies who appear in the news—one 73 years young who starts out to sing her way around the world, the other a fledgling of 96 years who, with a fierce pride in her ability to earn her own living, thinks nothing of a five-mile tramp each day through New York's theatrical district in her canvassing business.

The singer is Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink of the voice that never grows old. She has set out on a two-year tour which will take her to Australia. She was sick last fall, close to dying, when she decided that she had to make another round of the globe.

"I thought mitt myself," she says, "that I am too young to go and I want once more to see the world. I said mitt myself, why should I not see the beautiful world? I believe in God and I want to live a little longer. It may be beautiful over there where at last I am going, but ach! it is also very beautiful here."

And so Mme. Schumann-Heink is out trouping and heading for all lands but one.

"You know very well," she says, "that Mr. Hitler, he don't like me. I don't wish to be beheaded. But, Austria, yes, I go there and visit the graves of my father and mother once more."

Our lady of 96 summers is Mrs. Annie Elms, once an actress, who very recently played a part in the films. There isn't a week-day, rain, hail, snow or shine, that Annie does not travel with her stock of needles, pins, threads, powder, cosmetic and puffs, all last-minute necessaries in the dressing rooms. She's as straight as a sapling, with hair like the driven snow, and she is marveled at by the doctors of Johns Hopkins who write to her and visit her.

But the best they get from her as to how she keeps going so well and so actively, is that her mind is at ease and that she is self-radiant.

When it was mentioned to Annie Elms that she certainly is entitled to an old-age pension, she brushed aside the thought.

"Why," she exclaimed, "I would lose my self-respect! I don't need any help from anybody. I can make my own way."

Bon voyage, Mme. Ernestine! Happy days, Mme. Annie! We salute you as the poets hailed the women of Sparta.

States Should Celebrate Admission to Union

By James T. Williams, Jr.

EVERY American knows that the Fourth of July is the anniversary of American independence. It marks the day when the Declaration of Independence was unanimously adopted by the Continental Congress at Philadelphia in the year 1776. It is observed every year by the American people, under the leadership of the President, as the birthday of the nation.

Few Americans take cognizance of the fact that each of the 48 states also has a birthday—the day on which the state entered the Union.

The original 13 states entered the Union by ratifying the Federal Constitution. The date of ratification marks the birthday of each of these states.

The other 35 states were admitted to the Union by act of Congress. The day on which the President proclaimed the admission of each of these states marks the birthday of the state.

How to revive, among the people of the several states, a livelier sense of their authority and responsibility as citizens of a sovereign state is more and more becoming a national problem. This problem must be solved if the burden of government is to be shared by the several states with the federal government, and the federal government saved from the necessity of discharging the duties of the several states.

One way to quicken a livelier sense of state authority and state responsibility would be by annually observing the birthdays of the several states. This offers an opportunity for leadership by the Governors, who stand in much the same relation to the people of their respective states as does the President to the people of the United States.

* * *

Three States Were Born in May

IF the states observed their birthdays with the same fidelity that the birthday of the nation is annually observed, the month of May would be marked every year by birthday celebrations in three states—Minnesota, which was admitted to the Union on May 11, 1858; South Carolina, which was the seventh state to ratify the Federal Constitution, on May 23, 1788, and Rhode Island, the last of the original 13 states to ratify, on May 29, 1790.

Pennsylvania ratified on December 12, 1787.

Six states were born into the Union in the month of June: New Hampshire, which ratified the Federal Constitution on June 21, 1788; Virginia, which ratified on June 25 of the same year; Kentucky, which was admitted to the Union on June 1, 1792; Tennessee on the same day in 1796; Arkansas, on June 15, 1836, and West Virginia, June 20, 1863.

The three states whose birthdays fall in July are Idaho, admitted to the Union July 3, 1890; Wyoming, admitted on July 10 in the same year, and New York, which was the eleventh state to ratify the Federal Constitution, on July 26, 1788.

The August states in the calendar of state birthdays are: Colorado, which was admitted into the Union on August 1, 1876, and Missouri, admitted on August 10, 1821.

California sets a good example for other states of the Union by annually observing as Admission Day, September 9, the anniversary of the President's proclamation in 1850 bringing the Golden State into the Union. The day is a legal holiday in California.

The other states in which the birthday of the state is a legal holiday are: Nevada, which was admitted October 31, 1864; Colorado and Arizona, the admission of which on February 14, 1912, completed the Union from coast to coast.

* * *

A Suggestion For Students

A NATIONAL movement to bring about the annual observance of the birthdays of the several states would probably succeed if the young men and women in the public high schools would take the lead by sending to the Governor of their state a petition that he issue every year a proclamation calling upon the people of the state to unite in celebrating the birthday of their state.

Fostering a feeling of state pride is the first step toward quickening anew a sense of state responsibility. Every American is or has the opportunity to be twice a citizen—a citizen of the state in which he lives and a citizen of the United States. Under the American system of government citizenship offers a dual sovereignty. And the nation is best served by those Americans who take pride in the contribution which the state of their birth or adoption makes toward the progress and the power of the household of the nation. When the birthdays of the several states are annually observed by their citizens, the better prepared the American people will be to unite in annual observance of the birthday of the nation.
